NEW RA COLONELS

The Pentagon will convene a selection board on 14 May to consider permanent lieutenant colonels for promotion to colonel in the Regular Army.

The zone of consideration will include all lieutenant colonels through Promotion List No. 3186 in the 1955 official Army Register.

Pay Hike Pushed By SecDef Wilson

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has come out in support of action looking toward the possibility of a military pay increase.

He went on public record in favor of a new pay study as General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, head of the Strategic Air Command, told a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee this week that loss of manpower represents SAC's No. 1 problem at the present time.

General LeMay urged pay raises for officers and enlisted men with needed skills. For a detailed report on General LeMay's "career attractiveness" testimony, turn to Page 11.

Secretary Wilson was asked at his news conference on 1 May to state whether or not he would back the plea of the SAC in-C for a selective pay increase.

Said Mr. Wilson:

"I am going to appoint a committee of civilians and internal defense people to review the whole problem. I really thought that I could have announced it for you today, but I didn't quite get the job done, but there will be an announcement of it within a week, I am sure."

Mr. Wilson said, in response to a question, that the pay increase would be considered for all the Services, not just the Air Force. "Naturally you have to do it that way," he commented.

Secretary Wilson previously had made

Senate Group Approves Medicare; Boosts Maximum Cost Of Civilian Hospitalization

The Family Medical Care bill—with a number of significant changes—has been approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The measure is expected to be passed by the Senate early next week and probably will go to conference.

In approving the medical care plan, the Senate Committee cut $23 million from the cost of the plan. The group:

- Dropped parents and parents-in-law from the list of dependents who are now eligible for care in military facilities and who would become eligible for care in both military and civilian facilities under the terms of the House-approved plan.

- Eliminated authority for the Defense Secretary to contract for civilian medical care for retired members and their dependents and for dependents of deceased military personnel.

- Re-wrote the cost-feature of the civilian hospital care plan. The Senate Committee's version provides that patients must pay the first $25 of hospital

FACES THE ISSUE

The recent tragedy at Parris Island, S. C., which cost the lives of six recruits has been the subject of a searching inquiry by the Marine Corps.

This investigation has been culminated by the release of a statement to Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas by General Randolph McC. Pate, USMC, Commandant of the Corps. That statement, certain to be recognized as one of the most forthright documents of its kind, is published in full on Page 23; there is editorial comment on Page 10.

$1 MILLION GROCERY "SAVING" DECEPTIVE

The Defense Department has O.K.'d a $1 million annual reduction in surcharge collections at Army and Air Force commissaries throughout the world, but military families should not count on such a saving.

The surcharge, effective 1 May, dropped from 3 to 2½ per cent overseas and from 3½ to 3 per cent in the United States. This will mean a reduction in the surcharge of about $500 thousand in the United States and at least that amount overseas.

But there's a rub. Under the new Single Manager logistics concept being put into effect by the Defense Department, the Army Quartermaster General has overall responsibility for all food purchases. He is required now to compute the transportation costs of commissary items in the price to be charged; heretofore, this was computed as part of the surcharge.

So the likelihood of any considerable savings on Service grocery bills is said to be slight.

The surcharge tax, required by a rider to the Appropriations Act, was originally 5 per cent, but has dropped during the last several years as a result of added experience in figuring overhead costs. The Navy and Marine Corps grind the overhead costs into the price of the items and charge no surtax.

Coincidental with the reduction in the surcharge payment, it became known that Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has authorized establishment of eight more Air Force commissaries in the Z.I., at Abilene AFB, Tex.; Homestead AFB, Fla.; Klamath Falls AFB, Ore.; Little Rock AFB, Ark.; McGuire AFB, N. J.; Portsmouth AFB, N. H.; Suffolk County AFB, N. Y., and Wendover AFB, Utah.

Senate Unit Increases Family Housing Program; OK's Thousands Of New Homes

More than $1.6 billion in new money is authorized for military family housing in legislation approved this week by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency.

The Committee extended and expanded the current Capehart housing program which provided $1.3 billion for family housing for the 12-month period beginning last fall and due to expire on 30 Sept.

The new bill increases the total authorization to $3 billion, extends the life of the program through 30 Sept. 1959, and gives the Armed Forces authority to spend $18 million a month to amortize military housing mortgages. This is double the monthly expenditure previously authorized.

Under the program, the Services contract with private industry for the construction of family housing units on and near military bases for use as public

The Journal Sights The Week In National Defense

DEFENSE SECRETARY WILSON, meeting with Pentagon newsmen on 1 May, raised by over $1 billion the estimate of military expenditures for the fiscal year ending 30 June, compared with original Administration forecasts. He now calculates that bills paid by the Pentagon will total some $35.1 billion for fiscal '56. The first estimate was $34 billion, revised this past January to $34.6 billion. The initial budget request for fiscal year '57 called for $34.9 billion in new obligational authority—an increase from $33.1 billion in fiscal '56—and expenditure of $35.5 billion.

DURING APRIL, as a result of new defense reviews, the Administration asked Congress to vote another $547 million for the year starting 1 July, to add 15,000 men to the Navy, 10,000 to the Army, and provide for further acceleration of B-52 production for the Air Force. Mr. Wilson revealed this week that some B-52 wings—he did not mention how many—will be beefed up to a strength of 45 eight-jet bombers, instead of the normal complement of 30. At the same time, however, Secretary Wilson conceded at his news conference that, on the basis of what is known about Soviet production schedules, the Communists at this time are outproducing us in heavy bombers. Such a statement had been made by General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, C-in-C of the Strategic Air Command, to Senator Stuart Symington's Armed Services Subcommittee which is looking into the relative strength of U.S. and Soviet airpower.

GENERAL LEMAY'S TESTIMONY probably has done more to promote prospects of a new military pay increase and passage of other "career attractiveness" legislation than any other statement by a Defense official in recent months. His remarks concerning the threat to SAC combat efficiency as a result of the heavy loss of skilled manpower commanded front-page attention from coast to coast. Pentagon chiefs have been much impressed with the widespread editorial support in the nation's press for new pay increases for men in Service.

AS PAY RAISE PROSPECTS became brighter, the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps late this week were preparing to receive the final recommendations of the House Appropriations Committee on the military budget for fiscal '57. It can be expected that some significant changes will be made between the time the money bill clears the House and the time that it is reported out for a vote by the Senate Appropriations Committee. In any case, as expected in an election year, the defense budget is moving along the legislative path in speedy fashion, with wind-up action by mid-June now seem a good probability.

FAVORABLE CAPITOL REACTION to legislative proposals which improve conditions of military Service is evidenced with the Senate Banking and Currency Committee decision this week to recommend extension of the Capehart Act (see First Page). At the Pentagon on 2 May, Mr. Floyd S. Bryant was sworn in as Assistant Defense Secretary (Properties and Installation) in place of Mr. Franklin G. Floete, now General Services Administrator. Mr. Bryant, who will supervise all military construction, has been a Special Assistant to Secretary Wilson since October 1955 and served with former Assistant Defense Secretary Charles A. Coolidge in the latter's intensive review for Mr. Wilson of recommendations made by the Hoover Commission in connection with Defense Department activities.

ANOTHER PENTAGON APPOINTMENT this week saw a WWII Army Quartermaster Corps officer, Mr. William R. Compton, designated to be Deputy General Counsel of the Army effective 7 May. He replaces Mr. Lewis E. Berry, jr., who will be Deputy Federal Civil Defense Administrator. Mr. Compton has been General Counsel of the Office of the Quartermaster General since 1943.

THE DAY AFTER Mr. Wilson's press conference, the Pentagon announced on 2 May that SAC's 99th Heavy Bombardment Wing at Fairchild AFB, Wash., will begin conversion from Convair B-36's to Boeing B-52's this summer, and will transfer to Westover AFB, Mass. A second B-36 wing at Fairchild, the 92d, will remain permanently assigned there and is expected also to convert to B-52 aircraft. Current Defense Department policy is to assign only one HBW to a base.

THE 99th B-52 ANNOUNCEMENT came out simultaneously with word from Air Force Secretary Donald A. Quarles that the Convair Division of General Dynamics Corp. will build a new facility at Sorrento, Calif., for development and production of a guided missile system. It is estimated that the facility will employ as many as 6600 people by 1958; its cost will be about $40 million.

NEW OFFICIAL EMBLEM of the Wright Air Development Center, which will be carried on aircraft and ground vehicles and worn with certain sport and flying uniforms. The dominant figure is a 1909 Wright airplane—first military aircraft ever built—superimposed upon the configuration of a futuristic airplane. The emblem consists of a shield crossed by a diagonal line. Above the line the shield is a blue and below it is yellow, representing respectively the sky and enlightenment, knowledge, wisdom and research.

Marines Adopt New Chevrons For EM

A new type of chevron has been adopted for wear by all enlisted Marines. The new rank designators, which the Corps plans to start distributing in August, are designed to replace the two sizes of chevrons now in use. The Corps issues one size for use with the dress uniform and another size for wear with the service uniform.

Stripes on the new insignia will be 1/2 inch wide as compared with the present 5/16th inch stripes. Overall width of the new chevrons will be 3 and 5/8th inches.

The Marine Corps says that the new rank insignia are of a better quality and are cheaper to mass produce. Stripes on the new chevrons will be embroidered of Schiffl yarn on standard Marine Corps material.

The green on scarlet for Winter uniforms and gold on scarlet for Summer uniforms will have a buckram backing.

The Summer service chevrons of green or khaki will have hemmed edges with mitered corners and a lacquered backing.

Air Transportability Course For C-123

An Air Transportability Course that includes the rigging of heavy equipment for landing by assault aircraft as well as lashing and loading for parachute drops is being conducted by the 82d Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N. C. for Airborne Loadmasters from the Division and the XVIII Airborne Corps.

Increased use of the Fairchild C-123 assault plane to land heavy equipment has created a need for this training which is beyond the scope of the former Aerial Delivery Course.

Army Sees Good Start For Logistics Program 200 Named For Prospective Assignments

Army authorities said this week that the new Logistics Officer Program "is off to a good start" with about 200 officers from both the Combat Arms and Technical Services identified by DEPLOY for assignments to key logistical duties.

The plan calls for officers who are identified as logisticians or potential logisticians to be invited to enter the program. Invitational letters sent out thus far have received a 100 per cent acceptance rate, the Army said.

Officers participating in the program can look forward to top assignments in the logistics field. Alternating tours of duty between logistics work and assignments with the basic branch during the qualification phase of the program is prescribed.

In addition to a pattern of controlled assignments, officers in the program will be considered for selection to attend top level military schools and civilian universities.

All-Service Chaplains Meet in D.C. 8-9 May

"Preparing Men for Military Service" will be the subject of an address given by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, USA-Ret., Director of Selective Service, at the 9 May luncheon in Patton Hall Officers Club, Fort Myer, Va., to Army, Navy, Air Force and Veterans Administration Chaplains attending the annual meeting of The Military Chaplains Association.

Clergy from the surrounding Capital area also have been invited to attend. Cooperating Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churchmen will have on display more than 10,000 pieces of religious literature now available for use in the Armed Forces.

Other highlights of the 2-day Military Chaplains Association Annual Meeting will be the Founders Banquet 8 May, an audience with President Eisenhower at the White House, a Memorial Service at the Chaplains Cenotaph in Arlington Cemetery and an M.C.A. members reception for Vice President Nixon, Secretaries of the Armed Forces and members of the Department of Defense and of The Military Chaplains Association.

Associations Ask Repeal Of Dual Pay Laws; ROA Says Restrictions Are "Unrealistic"

Strong support for the revision of dual compensation laws restricting the employment of retired officers by the Government has been presented before a Kilday special House Armed Services subcommittee by leading military associations.

Radm. H. A. Houser, USN-Ret., told the subcommittee the Retired Officers Association believes "the dual office and dual compensation statutes can no longer be justified since they are, under present conditions, discriminatory, confusing, uneconomical and unrealistic."

He noted that as a result of present restrictions, one group of retired officers may be employed by the Government with full compensation, another with limited compensation, and a third, "by far the largest group," is denied the right to employment under any conditions.

The ROA said "the existing restrictions are not warranted because retired personnel have earned their retired pay through service rendered to the Government."

Charles H. Lofgren, National Secretary of the Fleet Reserve Association, asked that the dual pay and dual compensation laws be repealed and that retired enlisted men who gave up their commissions on the retired list be allowed to apply for restoration of their former officer rank.

Mr. Lofgren said the present restrictions under the 1894 dual employment law are "a hodge-podge" of the basic law, and there are so many excepted classes "it would take hours of research to determine whether an applicant meets the criteria of the Act, liberalized in so many instances by special legislation and excluding so many different categories."

He said if Government jobs were opened up for retired personnel now banned from such jobs because of the dual pay laws, the Civil Service Commission might find it easier to fill some of its registers in the fields of medicine, electronics, guided missiles, radar and atomic energy, "where the need for experienced personnel is vital to national defense."

G. D. Tilghman, National Adjutant of the Disabled Officers Association, and Henry W. Doyle of the Naval Reserve Association also urged new legislation to end the dual pay restrictions.

President Signs Doctors Pay Act

More than $19 million will be added to the May pay checks of approximately 10,000 physicians and dentists in the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

President Eisenhower signed the Medical Career Incentives measure (now Public Law 497) on 30 April, thus setting an effective date of 1 May.

The new Act provides immediate increases in longevity pay in amounts averaging $50 but ranging as high as $76 per month.

In addition, it increases the present special incentive pay for doctors from $100 per month to $150 per month for those who have completed two years' active service, $200 for those with six years' service and $250 for those with ten years' service.

This means that some members will receive annual pay boosts of more than $2700.

The Act authorizes constructive service of four years for dentists and five years for physicians who have completed internships.

Dr. Berry Tells Hopes For Career Expansion

Following President Eisenhower's approval of the pay raises for physicians and dentists, Assistant Defense Secretary (Health and Medical) Frank B. Berry issued a statement expressing the hope for expansion of the career Medical and Dental Corps in the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Dr. Berry noted that the Armed Forces need about 10,000 medical officers on active duty. At present, he said that about one-third are career personnel. He believes that this ratio should be at least two out of three.

The Assistant Secretary added that the Services are hopeful that many doctors now on active duty under obligated tours will remain in uniform upon completion of two years service. "Those who do," he pointed out, "will receive an immediate pay raise under the new law."

SECRETARY THOMAS TELLS NAVY PLANS

Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas, in an interview with THE JOURNAL, has told of Navy problems and plans for the future. His remarks come at a time when the House is preparing to conclude action on the military budget for fiscal '57, which contains funds for construction of a number of modern warships, including the world's first guided missile cruiser. Turn to page 21 for Secretary Thomas' answers to questions put him by the staff of THE JOURNAL.

Kilday Group Begins Study of Augmentation Plan on 9 May; Bill Adds 73,000 Regulars

Hearings on legislation to add 73,000 officers to the Regular ranks of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines Corps will open 9 May, before the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee.

The Pentagon proposal (HR 8692), which the President is urging the Congress to approve, gives the Air Force authority to integrate the largest number of officers—31,730. The Army will integrate 13,320, the Navy about 5,000 and the Marine Corps less than 100.

The Defense Department has said that Reserve officers "of all grades"—both on and off active duty—as well as selected qualified civilians, will be eligible "for appointment in appropriate permanent grades." The legislation does not spell out details showing the ranks in which integration will take place.

Some applicants are ruled out by a feature of the bill which specifies that all officers appointed under the plan must be able to complete 20 years of active Federal commissioned service before they reach their 55th birthday.

The immediate objective of the legislation is to increase Regular officer ratios

SEC DEF ASKS O.K.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson took the occasion of his news conference on 2 May to plump for passage of the Augmentation Bill. He said it was the most important action that could be taken at this time to improve stability in the Services.

Mr. Wilson expressed particular concern over the situation in the Air Force, where only about 17 per cent of the total officer corps are Regulars.

It is known that both Secretary Wilson and President Eisenhower are anxious for passage of the Augmentation Bill. They will put strong Administration support behind the plan.

in the Army and Air Force to 36 per cent and in the Navy to 48 per cent during the next two years. The Marine Corps would remain essentially at its present ratio of 50 per cent.

Boost School Funds Pentagon Pleads; Parents In Europe Deplore "Damage"

THE Defense Department has told Congress "it is imperative" to boost the present $240 ceiling on the education allowance for Service children overseas to $255.

The alternative would be to jeopardize future accreditation of secondary schools, or require increased use of nonappropriated funds and direct assessment of parents.

Speaking for the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, Assistant Army Secretary Hugh M. Milton, II, told a House Appropriations Committee that "such assessments for a well-established requisite of living normally furnished free to American citizens, can only be viewed as a pay cut and an increase in the cost of living."

He said the Defense Department needs $3 million more for education of youngsters than is provided in the current fiscal year. Mr. Milton noted that the Army is spending $259 per student, but added that $10 is contributed by deutsche mark support, the continuation of which is in doubt.

Assistant Secretary Milton said the Army estimates that costs will total $255.08 per pupil in fiscal '57; Navy, $252.51 and Air Air Force, $254.

As General Milton was pressing for added Congressional assistance, the European Congress of American Parent-Teacher Associations, meeting at Berchtesgaden, Germany, protested to Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson against what they termed "a denial of minimum standards of education our children could reasonably expect in an American community."

Taking cognizance of action by Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker to avert closing Army dependent schools a week early because of budget limitations, the P.T.A. group in Europe asserted that the provision of additional funds "will come too late to rectify the damage already done."

Here is the text of the protest letter to Mr. Wilson:

"The European Congress of American Parent Teacher Associations, representing 120 local P.T.A.'s, in Europe, North Africa and the Near East, is seriously concerned about the present condition of the schools which educate our children in these areas.

"Army-sponsored schools here have suffered materially as a result of a confused and inadequate funding program for the current school year. These Army schools educate dependent children of all Armed Services and government departments stationed in these areas.

"At the outset, the recommended budget for this school year was curtailed by a per student reduction of nine dollars, leaving the schools with a barely adequate budget.

"Subsequent changes in policy, upon which budgetary planning should have been revised, rendered the original budget far below minimum adequate educational standards.

"First, a seven and a half per cent across-the-board salary increase for Department of the Army civilians, including teachers, was apparently not considered in school budgetary planning. This considerable raise in teacher salary expense had to come out of the total school budget. No additional funds were provided.

"Secondly, the termination of the Austrian occupation made it necessary for Army-budgeted USAREUR schools to absorb added expenses of salaries and support of a considerable number of teachers on contract in Austria.

"These foreseeable factors created a

EUROPEAN P-TA ELECTS

BERCHTESGADEN. Mrs. John R. Hall, a parent, a former teacher and a former WAVE Officer in the Navy, was elected president of the European Congress of Parent-Teacher Association in their meeting here.

Mrs. Hall, wife of an Air Force Officer stationed at Wiesbaden, will be president of the organization for a year. The meeting attracted about 150 delegates from more than 120 P-TA's in Army, Navy and Air Force schools in England, France, Germany, Italy, North Africa and Saudi Arabia.

In the only contest for election of six new officers, Col. Roy N. Hillier, Jr., USAF, Dreux, France, won out over Maj. John W. Davis, USA, Stuttgart, for first vice president. Others elected were Mr. Norman McCumsey, a teacher from Ansbach, second vice president; Capt. William Chambers, USA, Augsburg, third vice president; Mrs. Connie M. Schneider, an Army parent from Mannheim, secretary, and Miss Mildred Linck, principal of the Nurnberg High School, treasurer.

The Congress delegates voted down, two to one, an effort by virtually all representatives from countries outside Germany to elect seven regional zone vice presidents in addition to the other officers. However, seven regional zones were set up. They are: Germany with Denmark, Holland and Norway, France, Arabia, French Morocco, Great Britain, Spain, and Italy with Greece, Turkey and Tripoli.

The Congress voted to prepare and service local P-TA's with promotional literature and to subscribe to stateside P-TA literature for free distribution to P-TA's.

deficit in those funds allocated to maintain the minimum essential education program which would satisfy accepted American standards.

"As soon as this situation became apparent to the Commander-in-Chief, USAREUR, a full report and request for assistance was forwarded to the Department of the Army. This request was not favorably considered at the time.

Thus the only course open to Army school officials was a drastic curtailment of the actual school year and the supply and academic program. This course of action had the following serious effects:

1.) An actual reduction of teacher take-home pay, resulting in a lowered standard of living and reduced morale.

2.) A denial of minimum standards of education our children could reasonably expect in an American community.

3.) A serious impact upon the morale of parents, teachers and children stationed on foreign soil.

"We have learned at the time of writing as the school year draws to a close, that supplemental funds have become available. They will come too late to rectify the damage already done.

"The European Congress of American Parent-Teacher Associations ask the help of the honorable Secretary of Defense, both as a government official and a parent, to insure adequate and realistic planning in the future to maintain educational standards we expect for our children."

Army Strength Up; Air Force Down; Navy Rises 5000; Marines Below 200,000

Newly released Defense Department statistics show that the Armed Forces began last month with 2,849,695 military personnel—a decrease of 14,137 from the previous month.

The Army started April with 1,064,407, compared with 1,060,485, at the beginning of March.

The Navy also scored a gain, from 669,394 to 674,288.

But it was a different story in the Air Force. That Service which had been granted budget approval for a force of 975,000, now is down to 911,200, compared to 934,218 at the beginning of March.

The Marine Corps has dipped below the 200,000 mark, compared with a 205,000 goal for 30 June. Present strength is put at 199,800.

Army Sets Better Deal For 3500 Aviators, Career Program Will Aid Promotions

The Army, anxious to encourage additional flying volunteers to boost its present strength of approximately 3,500 aviators, has taken steps to improve career and promotion opportunities for fixed wing and helicopter pilots.

An Army Aviation Career Program is being established.

It provides for centralized monitorship of assignments by the Career Management Division of the Adjutant General's Office, periodic rotation between flight and ground duty and "progressive development in the field of aviation by definitely planned school and job training."

Army personnel officials concede that in the past the aviator's big problem has been the lack of a career plan. It is pointed out that flight qualification is an added specialty, with opportunities for advancement solely as an aviator limited.

The lack of centralized planning and control of assignments and career pattern has disturbed aviators and prospective fliers. A Pentagon statement commented that "although the Department of the Army has made some adjustments to aviation grades to recognize position responsibilities, the situation has been only partially alleviated."

The Aviation Officer Career Program is said to be the answer. It provides for rotation of assignments, with at least one year of basic branch ground duty in each grade considered adequate to maintain branch proficiency.

There will be periodic assignments at branch and higher level schools.

The Army added that diversified assignments within the aviation field are vital to the development of high level staff aviation officers and said the new program will project assignments for aviators to prepare them through on-the-job training to serve in the four progressive stages of Army aviation: basic, supervisory, staff and supervisory, and high level staff.

Progressive formal aviation training will keep the aviator in pace with changing aviation equipment and operations.

ARMY AIR UP

Army Aviation, which now has a strength of about 2400 airplanes and 1400 helicopters, is shooting for a 1960 goal of 3100 fixed wing and 2300 rotary wing aircraft.

These Army planes will have a value of about $750 million.

When this buildup is achieved, the Army will have more than twice as many helicopters as all other military and civilian users combined.

Concurrently with the expansion of Army Aviation, a Defense Department decision has been made that the Army assume responsibility for the complete supply and maintenance support of its own aircraft instead of the Air Force.

A timetable calls for the full implementation of the Army Aviation Depot Plan by 30 June 1959. Work will be done at Sharpe General Depot, Calif.; Ft. Worth General Depot, Tex.; Atlanta General Depot, Ga.; and New Cumberland General Depot, Pa.

This will include training at appropriate intervals in basic flight, helicopter, instrument, and certain transition training courses.

The Deputy CofS for Personnel is responsible for staff supervision of the program. The Career Management Division of The Adjutant General's Office will serve as a centralized monitor of all aviation officer assignments.

Details of the program are contained in a new Army Regulation 600-105 entitled "Army Aviation Officer Program" and an amended insertion to TM 20-605 entitled "Army Aviation Officer Career Pattern." These publications, now in distribution, provide guidance for officers of the Combat Arms and Technical Services on the broad field of Army aviation as a career.

Family Housing Up

quarters. The mortgages are paid off with the rental allowances which are collected from military families assigned to the houses after they are completed.

At present (as of 10 April), the Defense Department has 139 Capehart housing projects, totaling 60,696 units, in various stages of development ranging from primary planning and engineering to actual construction of one project. Thousands of additional units are planned to ease the shortage of houses for almost 300,000 military families.

The Committee was expected to send the expanded program to the Senate floor late this week or early next week.

As amended, the program also increases the maximum average unit cost of the housing units from $13,500 to $15,000 for any single project. It sets a servicewide ceiling of $14,250 on the average cost, and establishes maximum limits on net floor area, based upon military rank, for each unit of housing constructed under the program.

The latter features were designed to permit the construction of housing under the Capehart program which will be comparable to housing produced with appropriated funds.

In reporting the measure, the Committee is expected to point out that although the appropriated-fund method for constructing military housing has many advantages, it does not permit expenditures of sufficient funds in time to meet urgent military housing requirements.

Marine Corps Plans To Promote 42,848 EM

Marine Corps Headquarters has authorized promotions for 42,848 enlisted men and women in two increments.

Of this number, approximately 21,560 privates first class, 18,156 corporals and 3,132 sergeants will be given additional stripes, using the cutting score system.

During the first period—from 27 April to 12 May—commanding officers may promote PFC's with cutting scores of 120; corporals with cutting scores of 129; and sergeants with cutting scores equal to that shown in column (1) opposite their military occupational specialty number on the chart shown below. Men and women advanced during the first period will have dates of rank of 1 April 1956, but pay and allowances will accrue from the date their promotions are effected.

PFC's with 97 cutting scores and corporals with 115 may be up-graded from 15 to 31 May. They will have dates of rank from 1 May 1956. Sergeants will be eligible for promotion in this period if their cutting scores are equal to that shown in column (2) opposite their MOS' on the following chart:

Kaneohe Task Force Becomes 1st Brigade

The First Provisional Marine Air-Ground Task Force, based at Kaneohe Bay, T. H., was redesignated the First Marine Brigade on 1 May.

The Task Force, led by Brig. Gen. Edward C. Dyer, USMC, was activated on a temporary basis at its present location on 25 Jan. 1953, with Brig. Gen. James P. Riseley, USMC, in command.

Originally, the Marine Corps planned to rotate West Coast units to Hawaii for six-month training periods. This plan became obsolete, however, when the First Marine Division was redeployed from Korea to Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Headquarters emphasized that the redesignation will not entail troop movements. The Brigade will remain at Kaneohe.

RAdm. Grenfell Will Lead Pacific Force Subs

RAdm. Elton W. Grenfell, USN, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Personnel Control, will succeed RAdm. Leon J. Huffman, USN, as Commander, Submarine Force, Pacific Fleet, late in August.

Admiral Grenfell's duties will be taken over by RAdm. Howard A. Yeager, USN, who now holds the post of Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Training and Education.

A new assignment for Admiral Huffman has not yet been announced.

expenses or the prevailing charge for inpatient care in facilities of the uniformed services multiplied by the number of days hospitalized, whichever is greater. This means that if an Army hospital charges $1.75 per day for inpatient care (the present charge), a dependent hospitalized in a civilian hospital would pay $36.75 for three weeks in the hospital.

- Gave all title III retired personnel the right to medical and dental care in facilities of the uniformed services, if available. At present such care is provided only for Navy and Marine Corps title III retirees.

- Eliminated a House provision designed to assure medical care in military facilities for persons retired after 30 years' active service.

- Repealed present subsistence allowance for retired Navy and Marine Corps enlisted men who are hospitalized in Service hospitals, and

- Eliminated all subsistence charges for enlisted men hospitalized in a medical facility of a uniform service.

These last two provisions, the Committee said, are "intended to place retired personnel of all the uniformed services on an equal basis."

In eliminating parents from the list of dependents eligible for medical care, the Committee said, "Since more than 95 per cent of the dependents of active-duty personnel are spouses and children, the exclusion of parents is not considered an unreasonable restriction."

One controversial provision of the medical care bill was retained. This section gives dependents the right to choose between civilian facilities and military facilities except that such permission may be denied dependents residing with members assigned to areas where adequate military facilities are available to the dependents.

Elimination of the permissive authority granted the Defense Secretary to "buy" a civilian medical care plan for retired personnel, their dependents and the dependents of deceased personnel, was explained by the Committee as follows: The estimated costs for providing medical care for dependents in this group "were disproportionately high because of the ages of the retired members and dependents who would have been eligible. Until it can be demonstrated that the new plan can be administered successfully and until cost experience can be developed, the committee decision was that dependents other than spouses and children of active duty personnel should not be made eligible for the civilian care plan."

The Committee noted that the amount of medical care presently furnished to dependents "is not a powerful inducement to a career in the uniformed services. This is true because private industry is extending liberal medical care privileges and because the maintenance of active-duty strengths at higher than normal peacetime levels, with an attendant increase in the number of dependents needing care, has created a workload that can hardly be met by the limited facilities and available physicians."

Notes On The Navy

THE BUREAU OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY is seeking applications from enlisted Hospital Corpsmen for a 12-month course in X-Ray Technique. Corpsmen up to and including grade E-6, who are high school graduates are eligible to apply.

A CAREER APPRAISAL and Counseling Course has been established at the Service School Commands, Bainbridge, Md., and San Diego, Calif., to provide replacements, and formation of new teams and refresher training for the 200 Navy Career Appraisal teams now in existence. Following success in improving the reenlistment rate throughout the Navy, it is now planned to accelerate the program. Ultimately, the Navy plans to have either a team or a trained reenlistment counselor in each ship and at each station.

THE NAVY PLANS to erect two new types of offshore platforms off Panama City, Fla., late in 1956 or early in 1957. They will differ from the "Texas Tower" platforms in design, size and purpose. The "Texas Tower" is primarily intended to augment the Nation's early warning network. The two new platform types to be constructed for the Navy will have the primary mission of obtaining ocean environmental data. The larger of the two types will be erected in 100 feet of water about 12 miles off the coast, with a platform 40 feet above the water line. The smaller type will be built in 60 feet of water, about two and one-half miles from the coast. It, too, will have a platform 40 feet high. The lower decks of the platforms will clear the crests of hurricane waves.

THE FIRST HR2S SIKORSKY TRANS-PORT helicopter accepted for delivery to the Navy was flown non-stop recently from the Bridgeport, Conn., factory to the U. S. Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md. The 236-mile flight was made by Maj. Roy L. Anderson, USMC. The twin engine Marine 'copter carried an equivalent payload in excess of military requirements and completed the trip in two hours and 36 minutes. Its average speed was 101 miles an hour.

SYSTEMS CAPABILITY

—where to look for it!

For systems work, at the discussion stage particularly, you must look beyond narrow fields of capability. The norm should be a company's past and present performance in all the technical fields and branches of industrial science systems work calls upon today.

The more deeply rooted you are in all the things of which systems are comprised, the better able you are to produce completely dependable systems.

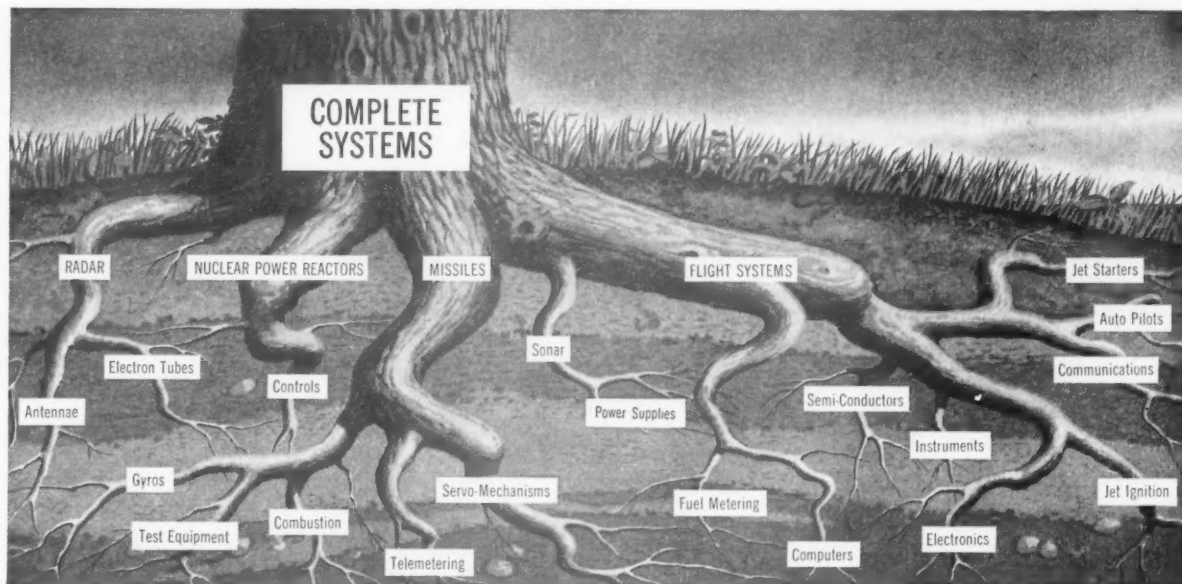

Bendix has an engineering and research staff of over 9,000 with an exceptionally broad range of technical abilities.

Over $80 million was expended on engineering and research functions in fiscal 1955.

Twenty-four widely dispersed manufacturing divisions located coast to coast employ 50,000.

The Bendix Systems Planning Group at headquarters in Detroit coordinates major systems work and gives you a single, centrally located contact.

Because Bendix is more deeply rooted in all the things of which systems are comprised, Bendix is better able to produce completely DEPENDABLE SYSTEMS

The position of Deputy Vice-Commander at AMC will be eliminated, with many of its responsibilities transferred to the Chief of Staff.

A native of Indiana, General Frederic H. Miller is a graduate of Purdue University in the Class of 1932. He entered the service four months later as a flying cadet.

During 1943, General Miller went to England and was assigned the next year as chief of staff for the Second Combat Bomb Wing in England. Later he was division air inspector and commanding officer of the 491st Bomb Group. He became assistant director of operations for U. S. Strategic Air Force Headquarters in the European theater in October, 1944.

General Troup Miller was born at Omaha, Nebr. He was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1930 and commissioned a second lieutenant of cavalry. He began flying training the same year and after being rated a pilot was transferred to the Air Corps in December, 1931.

B/G Troup Miller

In his early service, General Miller was an engineering officer, flying instructor, and Commander of the Air Corps Replacement Training Center. In 1942 he became assistant project officer at the Air Corps Combat Crew School at Smyrna, Tenn., and the following June was appointed director of training there.

After graduation from the Army-Navy Staff College in February, 1944, he went to the Southwest Pacific theater as deputy chief of staff of the 5th Air Force. In June 1944 he was named deputy chief of staff of the Far East Air Forces, and in January, 1945, assumed command of the 59th Air Service Group in the Southwest Pacific. He was appointed chief of staff of the 13th Bomber Command in the Southwest Pacific in May 1945 and later was commander.

General Miller went to Burtonwood, England, in June 1953 and in September 1953 became Commander of Northern Air Materiel Area.

SecDef Pushes Pay

From first page—

no direct statement on the military pay situation.

His decision to name a special pay committee makes it virtually certain that the Pentagon will sponsor pay raise legislation for action in the next Congress.

Mr. Wilson is known to feel that the Career Compensation Act, voted into law last year, did not provide adequate increases for all Servicemen. He has advocated, for example, that senior military commanders receive greater compensation.

The pay increase which went into effect on 1 April 1955 cost about $745 million per year, but the forthcoming pay raise request is expected to carry a considerably lower price tag.

The reason for the lower cost is that Pentagon chiefs do not envisage any across-the-board increases. Current thinking tends toward selective pay increases to attract and retain officers and NCO's with vitally needed training and experience.

This approach will present formidable problems, of course. Where the argument is being made that the Services can attract and retain sufficient numbers of cooks and truck drivers, but need more jet engine maintenance mechanics, many will say that a cook or truck driver serving in Korea, without his family, deserves as much pay—rank for rank—as a mechanic who is living in comfortable quarters in the United States.

It's going to be a tough problem—one that is recognized from the outset by Mr. Wilson and his associates.

That is one reason the Secretary was not able to announce the membership of the Pay Committee this week. He wants to obtain the best possible assistance available from civilian circles.

There is some thought that the Secretary will invite participation in the new pay study of such recognized military pay experts as Mr. Charles R. Hook, Brig. Gen. Laurence Whiting, and Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, former president of Notre Dame. They served on the famed Hook Committee, which recommended a complete revision of military pay scales in 1948—the first Defense Department civilian group to study the problem. Another member of this group was Keith S. McHugh of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

It is anticipated that day-to-day work of the new Pay Committee will be supervised by Assistant Defense Secretary Carter L. Burgess, Pentagon Manpower, Personnel and Reserve Forces chief.

GE Shows New T-58 Turbine For 'Copters

A powerful stride forward in the expanding military use of helicopters was scored in Washington 2 May with the public debut of General Electric's welterweight T-58 aircraft gas turbine engine.

Capable of producing 1,000 horse power, but weighing only 325 pounds including a 75-pound gearing, the T-58 is described as "pound for pound the most powerful turbo-shaft yet announced."

Billed as "tomorrow's helicopter engine today," the T-58 was unveiled coincidental with the annual meeting of the American Helicopter Society.

The new engine, developed under contract with the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, working in cooperation with the Army and Air Force, is expected to pave the way for use of gas turbine engines in virtually all helicopters during the next decade.

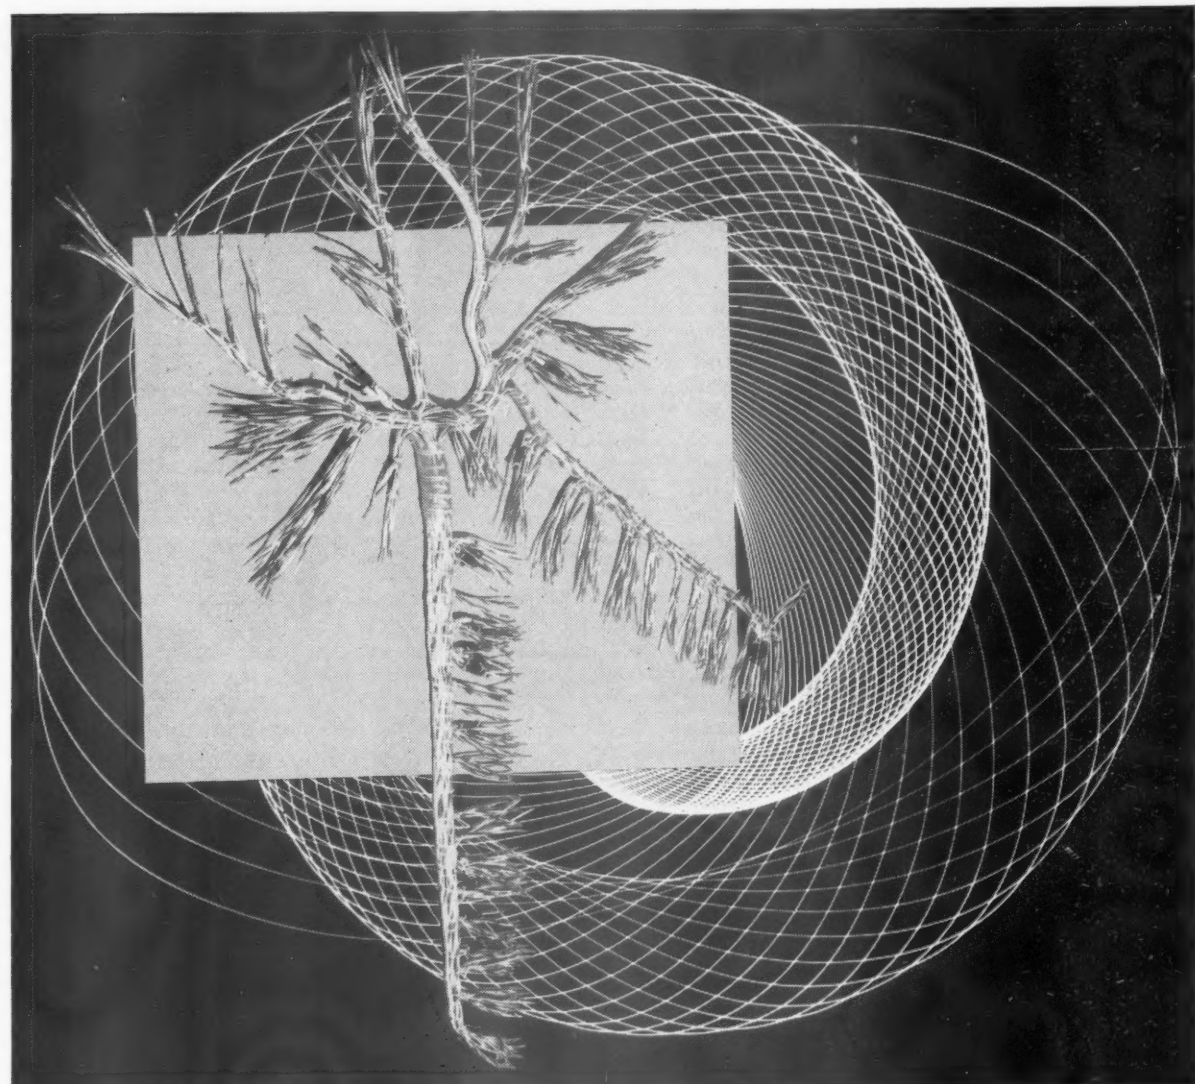

Army Navy Air Force Journal
5 May 1956 (Vol. 93, P. 1105)

General Electric officials revealed that two of the engines will be installed in a Sikorsky S-58 anti-submarine helicopter for flight tests.

LCdr. Robert R. Thoe, USN, was the Navy's project officer for the T-58, under contract and development for two years.

The T-58 is less than five feet long and 16 inches in diameter. Its specific fuel consumption is given as 0.69 pounds per hour per horsepower at normal rating.

It will permit an antisubmarine helicopter to stay aloft 50 per cent longer than an equivalent piston 'copter, according to Harold T. Hokanson, who was in charge of the project for GE.

This intricate wiring harness is part of the "nervous system" of AUTONETICS' MG-4 armament director for jet aircraft.

Man has created a nervous system with reflexes faster than his own

Today's jet planes fly at speeds far beyond man's capacity to think and act. That's why today he is designing electro-mechanical stand-ins... automatic systems that expand his reasoning power, his nervous-reflex action, his muscular ability.

For example, shooting a crow with a rifle from a moving jeep would be quite a trick. But suppose the crow were flying at 750 mph? And suppose you were angling across at more than 800 mph! Hard to imagine, yet it illustrates the problem our jet pilots would face if they had no mechanical helpers. Fortunately, our jets have armament control systems like the AUTONETICS-designed and built MG-4 Fire Control. This automatic system enables jet pilots to hit even invisible targets flying at supersonic speeds. It calculates every factor in split seconds—speed of target, wind velocity, angle of approach—and directs the pilot through a complete attack.

Armament control systems are but one of the electro-mechanical avenues which the AUTONETICS Division of North American Aviation is exploring. Others include auto pilots, auto navigators, computer systems and special products.

Candor and Vigor. Despite the sorrowful circumstances surrounding the recent drowning of six Marine recruits at Parris Island, the Corps' Commandant, General Randolph McC. Pate, has treated it with forthrightness and strength of character that won for him the admiration and praise of the seasoned members of the House Armed Services Committee.

General Pate's testimony before the Committee, as well as his report to the Secretary of the Navy, spared no one—not even himself. Furthermore the entire text of his report and recommendations (see page 23) as well as the report and recommendations of the Court of Inquiry, was given to the press and the people. The Commandant pulled no punches. He said that some practices have crept into the handling of recruits which are "not only unnecessary but do not comport with the dignity of the individual or his self-respect." These were recognized, he said, and steps had been taken to correct them "but they were not fully effective." He criticized the Court of Inquiry for confining itself to the "relatively narrow" issue of the degree of culpability of the drill instructor involved, whereas, he declared, the court was not so confined by its appointing order or by the evidence or information.

At the same time General Pate made a strong case for the Marine Corps' traditional system of training under the direct supervision of sergeant drill instructors—the men under whom the recruits must fight if war comes. He was prepared with a complete renovation of the system, which while retaining its basic principles, girds it with the most stringent and tight supervision by which he keeps his own hand on it at all times.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), declared at the conclusion of General Pate's testimony, that "during my 42 years in the Congress, this is the first time within my memory that the senior officer of any Armed Service has had the courage to state in public session that his Service could be deficient in some respect." The Commandant's frankness and candor, the Chairman asserted, has removed any doubts that may have existed that there would be a "whitewash" of the affair.

The American people, too, as shocked and grieved as they may be at the "tragedy of Ribbon Creek," will be heartened and given new respect and admiration for the Corps by General Pate's admirable and vigorous handling of the event which cast a pall over that fine organization greater than the public can realize.

Pay Ball Rolling. Within a week, Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson promises a new committee of civilian-military experts will be appointed to review the entire problem of Service pay with particular reference to what must be done to stop the wasteful and inefficient loss of skilled men, both commissioned and non-commissioned, in all of the Armed Forces. (See story on first page.)

The credit for bringing this sorry and sad problem so forcefully to Congressional and public notice that some action was virtually forced must go to General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, CinC of the Strategic Air Command (note his telling testimony on the next page). To make SAC the combat-ready force it must be to carry out our national policy, General LeMay has constantly kept himself aware of all the factors that contribute to or hinder his operational readiness. Long before the last pay act was made law, he had directed literally hundreds of surveys of all types among all components of his far-flung command. He had taken every action he could administratively and had made scores of concrete recommendations to the department for additional funds and additional legislation to help career attractiveness. When the pay increase law was enacted he told THE JOURNAL that his surveys convinced him that the raises provided in that act would not be sufficient to hold enough men to do the job properly. Time has borne out his forecast. Through further surveys and studies he some time ago started plugging for pay increases in specific categories of hard-to-keep specialists to bring their incomes up to a level where they would be competitive with industry. He has shown convincingly not only that this is necessary for the efficient operation of his command but also that its costs would be offset by the savings that would be made in reduced turn-over and lowered training requirements.

Secretary Wilson now makes it clear that the committee he will appoint will study the pay problem of all the Services—"Naturally you have to do it that way," he says. It is almost certain that he will ask some members of the former Hook Committee to serve on the new one. That group not only did an outstanding job on the 1948 pay revision, but many of its members have kept up-to-date on developments so that they are aware of the special problems facing the forces today.

Funds for Schools. We hope Congress will heed the plea of the Department of Defense for a modest increase in the appropriations for the conduct of schools for the children of Service families stationed abroad and in areas in this country where no normal community facilities are available.

While Army Secretary Wilber Brucker acted promptly and forcefully once he became aware of the proposed curtailment of schooling in Europe, one can see by the reaction even at this late date (see P-TA story on page 3) that Service families are indignant at the threats to their children's education and that they fear for the future. It is just such situations which upset morale and lessen career attractiveness.

It is hard to follow the reasoning of Congress over recent years in consistently failing to give the Services even the bare minimum they have estimated it requires to operate these schools. Perhaps they will have heard from some of their constituents abroad and may now be willing to be more helpful.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—With the advance knowledge and approval of President Truman, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal this week cracked back at the Senate Military Committee's bill for the unification of the Armed Forces, declaring that it is based on a false major premise. Secretary Forrestal opened his statement with a protestation that the Navy is "solidly" behind the President's program and objective in seeking "an integrated military-foreign relations-industrial-economic organization which will meet the security needs of the nation" but that the bill under consideration "is based upon a major premise which is false in that it fails to differentiate between unified command in combat areas and the planning functions at the seat of the government which require deliberation and conference."

50 Years Ago—An officer who was at San Francisco at the time of the earthquake writes that "one of the happy thoughts of the commanding officer of the Presidio was ordering out his band to cheer up the sufferers, and in every way we all tried to make as much out of the doleful situation as possible."

90 Years Ago—The ease with which seamless steel tubes can now be manufactured seems likely to solve the main difficulty lying in the path of the introduction of wrought-iron guns of large calibre. The chief obstacle in cannon of this species has been, of course, not so much to secure sufficient strength (for that can be got without great difficulty), as to procure a sound and perfect bore.

Recognition For Installation Engineers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The ABC's of the USAF are Airplanes, Bases and Crews. The estimated replacement value of Air Force real property facilities as of July 1955 was 16.7 billion dollars. By 1958, it is expected to be between 19 and 20 billion dollars (See TIG Brief, 4 Apr. '56).

The Installation Engineers of the Air Force are charged with the planning, programming, and maintenance of all and the operation of many of the facilities represented in the dollar values listed above. In addition, continuing statements by the C/S and Vice C/S of the Air Force indicate a need to further expand our base structure to keep pace with the 137 Wing Air Force. The nuclear age is also forcing an even greater dispersion of our base structure. This means more facilities.

The above adds up to a tremendous responsibility for the Installation Engineer. But has the recognition given this individual kept pace with his importance? I believe a few facts will reveal it has not.

a. With respect to rank. There are very few officers in this area holding rank of general officer, despite the tremendous responsibility carried by many. In the U. S. Air Force there are approximately 425 general officers. In the installations and allied construction area, there are now 2 major generals and 5 brigadier generals, for a total of 7. Of this number, 2 are retiring in July 1956 and 2 were brought in from the materiel area.

b. With respect to Staff Stature. While many major commands and subcommands have recognized the importance of the Installation Engineer and placed him at major staff level, others have still submerged this important staff officer under the materiel office, an only slightly comparable function. Most prominent among these commands which have failed to elevate the Installation Engineer is SAC, our major air command of greatest prestige.

c. With respect to Professional Stature. The doctor, dentist, lawyer, and chaplain have been accorded a truly professional stature within the Air Force. The Installation Engineer is far behind his civilian counterpart and even his sister service counterparts (both Army and Navy) in this respect. It is held by some that he is not a professional. Yet most states require professional registration for practicing engineers, the same as for doctors, dentists, and lawyers. And coping with the multi-billion-dollar facility maintenance problem of the Air Force certainly requires professional engineer talent.

I suggest that to get "more Air Force for the dollar spent," Headquarters U. S. Air Force and major air commands and subcommands make increasing efforts toward career incentive and attractiveness for Installation Engineers. How? By increased promotional opportunities, by more professional recognition and more staff and command stature.

Urge Pay Raise, Separation Allowance, Increased Commissary-Exchange Benefits

The Strategic Air Command has called on Congress to raise military pay and restore commissary and base exchange benefits as two steps in a five-point program designed to create a "professional" Air Force.

SAC Commander, General Curtis LeMay, USAF, said the lack of skilled manpower in his command is "my most critical deficiency," and that it "pertains not only to SAC but to the military services as a whole."

General LeMay told the Symington special subcommittee investigating the Nation's airpower that careers of Air Force officers are not commensurate with what they can get outside. Unless corrective action is taken, he said, "we are going to be faced with a very critical situation in that we will not be able to man the aircraft we have."

Brig. Gen. Horace Wade, USAF, SAC personnel chief, accompanied General LeMay and briefed the committee on current SAC personnel problems and the steps needed to correct the situation.

"First," he said, "we need a revised pay structure, one that is competitive with industry, and which will compensate our enlisted personnel by specialty."

"We also need a revised pay structure for our officers, one which will reflect an adequate increase for an officer as he gains in years of service and experience."

General Wade said the pay structure "must be aligned with industry in regard to hardship assignments. We believe that we must have an allowance for forced family separation." When an individual is moved to an area where he cannot take his family, he said, "we feel that he is entitled to an additional allowance."

"We also feel that there should be an adjustment for pay by overseas areas."

For example, today we pay the individual going to Thule the same amount of overseas pay as the individual that goes to England or to Paris."

The SAC personnel chief added, too, "We need a pay for remote areas within the U.S."

Other steps which were urged include "adequate family housing, complete dependent medical care, the restoration of commissary and base exchange rights, and educational rights."

"If we are going to retain the people, we must look after the family," the General said.

"There is no housing at all available" in many SAC areas, he told the subcommittee.

He said "another important area similar to the one on housing is dependent medical care . . . In our opinion, the dependents should be provided with the same medical care that is provided for the military member, complete in all respects."

Commissary and base exchange rights must also be restored, he said. Because of constant attacks by business organizations, "stocks have been cut, prices have been raised, surcharges have been imposed, and high lobbyists in our nation's capital continue to try to get the commissaries and base exchanges closed."

"Far from closing them, we want to see them expanded. We want to see them have bigger stocks, more name brands and lower prices."

The fifth step in the program, General Wade said, is to provide a GI-bill-type educational program for active duty Servicemen. He said many men leave the Service to take advantage of the educational opportunities offered them under the GI Bill for WWII or Korean service and that they should be given the same opportunities while on active duty in order to retain them in the service.

General LeMay told the Subcommittee "our offensive capability in terms of a long range strategic air force could be improved considerably." The first step in this direction, he said, would be "the selection and retention within the force of highly skilled technicians and professional combat crews."

AIR FORCE WILL MAKE 5200 M/SGTS

The Air Force has revealed plans to make 5200 master sergeants during the fiscal year starting 1 July. They will have an average service of 35 to 40 months in grade, although the minimum requirement for a 7 skill airman is only 16 months.

Reporting airman promotion plans for Fiscal '57 to the House Appropriations Committee, the Air Force showed that there will be little change from this year. In addition to the master sergeants, the Air Force plans to make the following promotions, with the FY '56 programmed totals in parentheses: E-6, 11,100 (12,102); E-5, 54,000 (52,492); E-4, 121,480 (120,000); E-3, 132,000 (154,697); and E-2, 120,000 (122,827).

It was pointed out that the promotion ratio to master sergeant will be 1 out of 12.7 airmen on hand in E-6 and 1 out of 11.2 to E-6.

AIR FORCE SETS 9000 OFFICER HIKES EACH YEAR THROUGH FISCAL 1960

THE Air Force intends to make 9144 officer promotions in the year beginning 1 July and will follow this up with 9285 advancements for fiscal years 1958-1960. This is revealed in newly released Congressional budget testimony.

It was reported that the Air Force strength by grade will approach legislative limitations during the 1960-62 period; until that time, a considerable number of Air Force officers can look forward to filling assignments calling for a higher grade.

Air Force officials said "this system was designed to permit continuing advancement opportunities up to the time when retirements increase in number. These retirements," it was pointed out, "will create vacancies and permit continuation of the promotion plan."

The following table shows actual fiscal '56 and '56 promotions, with fiscal year '57 totals estimated, as is the case for the later years. The fiscal '56 total includes about 1970 accelerated medical and dental promotions.

defense ON CAPITOL HILL

THE RUSSIANS have few problems in manning their air arm, General Curtis LeMay has told a Senate subcommittee investigating the relative strength of U.S. and USSR airmight. The SAC Commander and his personnel chief, Brig. Gen. Horace Wade, said their investigations indicate that Russians, as a general rule, are afraid they'll be kicked out of the air force for some reason. In addition to a Russian air officer's pay, General LeMay said, he gets free uniforms, free food, free tobacco and "is entitled to 50 per cent discount in any store and restaurant in Russia."

THE U. S. AIR FORCE TECHNICIAN "is being paid $50 to $300 a month less than he can get doing the same job in civilian life," according to General Wade. He told the Symington subcommittee that the Air Force has 239 different specialties that it must fit into seven pay grades. "This is ridiculous," he asserted. "It means that we operate on the old philosophy that one man is worth as much as another regardless of his skill." He said "We must get in step with the facts of life and put our military pay structure on a more practical basis if we are to keep the people that we need, and also stay within a livable pay roll. We need a pay scale based on the same factors as are recognized in private industry. The pay scale must be based on the specialty and the going wage for that specialty in industry."

A PROMOTION has been recommended for Brig. Gen. Thomas North, USA-Ret., Secretary of the American Battle Monuments Commission. Authority for the President to appoint him to the rank of major general is contained in legislation (S. 3498) approved by the Senate late last week. The measure also extends the authority of the Commission to all areas in which the Armed Forces of the United States have conducted operations since 6 April 1917. The Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs called attention to "the outstanding manner in which General North has performed his duties over the years. Under his direct supervision," it said, "the extensive construction of memorials and cemeteries has been brought to a point of near completion at a savings of several million dollars."

AS A RESULT OF THE PARRIS ISLAND TRAGEDY, House Armed Services Subcommittee Chairman Overton Brooks (D-La) said this week some doubts have been raised in his mind about another problem. The Brooks group currently is considering legislation to revise the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Noting that the proposed revisions would give commanding officers greater authority to punish men for non-judicial offenses, Congressman Brooks told the Marine Commandant that he is not "at all sold" on the idea after hearing about the so-called "disciplinary" march at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot.

CRITICISM OF THE MARINE SYSTEM of selecting drill instructors was deflated by Congressman F. Edward Hebert (D-La). He said the inference might be drawn that the drill instructor system in the Marine Corps should be overhauled, but he reminded the committee that the system "has proved most adequate in the past," and, he added, the most perfect man who ever walked the earth was unable to make "a perfect record" in the selection of only twelve men.

THREE-STAR RANK for the Surgeon Generals of the Army and Navy and for the Judge Advocate Generals of the Army, Navy and Air Force is advocated by Representative Joe L. Evins (D-Tenn). He has introduced legislation (HR 10790) which would entitle the five officers to be upgraded, and to be carried in addition to other flag and general officers authorized by law.

NAVY SHIPBUILDING legislation was cut by more than a billion dollars during consideration by the Senate Armed Services Committee. However, the step won't affect the Navy's construction-conversion program. A House-passed bill, sponsored by Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee, included authority for $1.4 billion for the construction of 23 new ships (mostly guided missile vessels) and the conversion of 23 others. The Senate Committee eliminated all of the conversions, all but two of the ships, and all but $23 million of the authorized funds, noting that the Navy already has sufficient authorized tonnage to build and convert the other vessels in the program. The Congress is expected to appropriate the entire $1.4 billion and the Navy will build the ships under present authority. Chairman Vinson's purpose in getting House approval for the program was to inform the public.

MEMO For Journal Readers

GLOOMY PROSPECTS for medical care in the Armed Services during the next five months became known this week, even as President Eisenhower signed legislation boosting the pay of physicians and dentists with the objective of providing a long-range cure to the officer shortage. Naval Personnel officials disclosed the release from active duty of about one-third of the active duty strength of the Medical and Dental Corps during the first 10 months of this year following the completion of obligated service. Replacements won't be available until late August. AS A RESULT, the Navy says "it is obvious that there will not be enough medical and dental officers to fill all authorized billets and many commands must, of necessity, accept gaps of varying periods and degrees of medical and dental officer coverage."

HOUSE REJECTION CAN BE EXPECTED if the Senate version of the Family Medical Care Bill eliminates benefits for dependent parents. The House Armed Services Committee has opposed vigorously all proposals during the past several years to take away rights and privileges for Servicemen and their families. A SAVINGS CLAUSE invariably is written into new personnel legislation. The Senate Committee contends that the problem of the parents is not grave, since 95 per cent of all dependents are wives and children. The House Committee, based on its previous attitude, likely will take the position that if the problem is so minor in nature it will be as simple to include parents as to exclude them.

THE GREAT CONCERN FELT by Service parents in Europe over threats of curtailed education for their children is pointed up in the fact that officers on active duty participated in the drafting of a letter of protest to SecDef Wilson (see Page 3). It was signed by a colonel, who was president of the P.T.A. Congress. NORMALLY OF COURSE, military men do not send or sign letters of protest to the Secretary of Defense.

INTER-SERVICE COOPERATION is pointed up in the publication in today's issue of a photograph (Page 29) which shows members of the West Point Debating Team, which recently won the National Invitational Debate Tournament—called the "world series" of college debating. Team coaches are both Air Force officers, Capt. R. A. Hansen, USAF, and Capt. A. C. Greenleaf, USAF. The 7 April issue of The Journal reported that the team at the USAF Academy had won the National Rifle Assn. Inter-Collegiate Freshman Rifle Championship. Its coach is an Army officer, Lt. Col. Allen M. Burdett, jr., USA, USMA '43.

FISCAL LEGERDEMAIN which saw the Administration estimate the cost of all approved defense programs for the current fiscal year at $35.7 billion and then advise Congress that because of slippage only $34 billion would be spent, won't be tried again. The Pentagon not long ago revised the $34 billion forecast to $34.6 billion. Now comes word from SecDef Wilson that costs will reach $35.1 billion, when all the bills are paid it could go even higher than that.

FOR THE FIRST TIME, an American has been made a Brother in the famous "Constables of Guyanne" organization, composed of wine growers in the region near Bordeaux, France. He is Col. Ralph W. Hansen, USA, who has the title of Grand Counsellor.

THEY AREN'T TALKING OUT LOUD but Air Force and Navy leaders are less than enthused—to say the least—over vigorous efforts being made by Defense Department leaders to sign up thousands of young men for six-month Reserve service in the Army and Marines. It's pointed out that these men, potential airman and sailor recruits, are taken out of the manpower pool for eight years. AIR FORCE CONCERN is understandable, indeed; latest strength figures show a drop during a single month from 934,000 to 911,000; that's a long way from the 975,000 budget goal.

CONTINUAL PRESSURE is kept on the Services to "cut the pipeline" in order to save money. The Air Force may be an exception. Studies are underway looking to use of pipeline delivery of fuel to 30 bases. Experimental use of the pipeline system at two bases has saved over $500 thousand per year in transportation costs.

EVER WONDER HOW ACCURATE a chronometer must be for use by the U. S. Navy? The answer: it cannot be more than 1.55 seconds off per 24 hours. Incidentally, newly released capitol testimony shows that famed seafarer Magellan, lacking a chronometer, misplaced his position in longitude by more than 3000 miles while making a dead-reckoned voyage across the Pacific.

SYMPATHETIC TREATMENT is anticipated by Congress during the lovely days of Spring and early Summer in Washington for 16 enlisted Naval airmen who will winter over at the South Pole. At present, there is authority to grant flight pay to military "officers" who cannot fulfill proficiency flying requirements because their assignment makes it impractical. Congress has been asked to grant this privilege to "members" of the Services, whether officer or enlisted. THE NAVY POINTS OUT that 8 officers and 16 enlisted men assigned to Operation Deepfreeze won't be able to put in flying time from 1 March to 1 Oct. because of total darkness, snow and severe cold.

EXOTIC SOUNDING DUTY POSTS are going to a number of young Coast Guard officers. They are being tabbed to command Loran Stations at such sites as Biorka, Aguadilla, Tarumitao and Tobago.

THE ARMY'S BID for more interest by senior officers in flying assignments will be strengthened by announcement of the new Aviation Career Program (Page 4). In the past, many officers have been reluctant to apply for flying training because of the feeling that, as they reached field grades, they would not receive assignments commensurate with their rank. THE NAVY WILL ENCOUNTER something of a similar problem in the years immediately ahead as large numbers of officers whose service has been exclusively as fliers will be serving in the ranks of commander and captain. Some lack diversified training to take on other assignments and there may not be enough top aviation jobs to go around. That could lead to a rising pass-over rate.

THERE'S A NEW SIGN on the wall of the office at the Pentagon which handles Army officer promotion action. It quotes from Psalm 75. . . . "set not up your horn on high. And speak not with a stiff neck. For promotion cometh neither from the East, nor from the West, nor yet from the South. . . ."

Clark Bros. Co. puts

5,500,000 watts on wheels

Completely self-contained on one railroad car and capable of safe travel at any train speed, this turbo-mobile power plant will deliver 5,500 KW within hours after reaching site where emergency power is needed.

Conceived by the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the United States Navy, such a project had never been faced before and set up staggering problems of design and construction. Original specifications called for a minimum of 4,500 KW, but Clark Bros. Co., beat that by 25%, with additional overload capacity. The completely new type of gas turbine drive can use almost any liquid or gaseous fuel. One man can operate it.

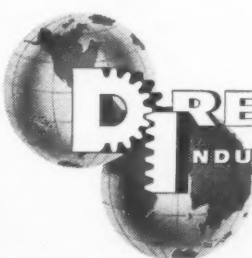

The ability of Clark Bros. Co., one of the Dresser Industries, to design and build this revolutionary new power plant springs from its 75 years of specialized manufacturing experience. "Precision by the ton" is literally true of Clark engines, compressors and turbines serving the world's basic energy industries.

Dresser integrated operating units quickly mobilized for unusual needs.

In their specialized spheres of service to the oil, gas, chemical, electronic and other industries, each Dresser company has a long background of successful individual performance. When special conditions arise or needs that are best answered by supplementary research, engineering or production facilities, all divisions of Dresser Industries, Inc. can be mobilized into effective teamwork for prompt action. This is the Dresser Plus performance which has made Dresser products and services a standard of comparison the world over.

Tomorrow's progress planned today

Navy Secretary Tells Plans For OCS Boost, Possible Use Of Dr-Draft And 6-Mo. Trainees

Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas, in the following question-answer interview with THE JOURNAL, tells what the Navy is doing to counter the growing Russian submarine threat, what problems are posed as a result of Navy commitments overseas, and what manpower difficulties the Navy faces during the next 18 months.

Mr. Thomas reveals that the Navy faces a shortage of technicians, that OCS quotas will be almost doubled, and that the doctor-draft may have to be used by the Navy during the coming fiscal year. He also says the Navy is studying the possibility of adopting the six-month Reserve trainee program.

Here are JOURNAL questions answered by the Secretary:

Q—Is the continuing build-up of Soviet Sea Power placing any new emphasis on the roles and missions of U. S. Naval Forces?

A—The continuing build-up of Soviet Sea Power is certainly emphasizing the roles and missions of the U. S. Naval Forces. However, this is by no means a new emphasis. The Navy has always been responsible for holding control of the sea and for the conduct of prompt and sustained combat incident to operations at sea. Among the specific functions assigned to the Navy are:

- To seek out and destroy enemy naval forces and to suppress enemy sea commerce.
- To gain and maintain general sea supremacy.
- To control vital sea areas and to protect vital sea lines of communication.
- To establish and maintain local superiority (including air) in an area of naval operations.
- To seize and defend advanced naval bases and to conduct such land operations as may be essential to the prosecution of naval campaign.

The Soviet naval build-up has not been instantaneous. It has been a gradual, progressive growth and we have been well aware of it.

The Navy roles and missions have been and continue to be of major importance in providing for national security and in supporting the foreign policy of the United States. Without the ability to control the seas, we could not have in the past, could not now, nor in the future support our Allies, our bases and our forces overseas.

There is no question but that the growing Soviet naval strength in submarines, ships, and high performance aircraft is a matter of grave concern. The Soviets are, or soon will be, in a position to challenge our potential control in certain peripheral sea areas of Europe and Asia. Their submarine force would seriously challenge us in the ocean areas in the event of a general war. All of this emphasizes that if we are to ensure the free use of the oceans for ourselves and the other peace loving nations of the world, if we are to support our allies and be able to move our forces overseas, if we are to capitalize on the inherent advantages accruing to him who controls the sea in projecting our power and influence when and where we desire, we must maintain an effective Navy fully capable of carrying out its critical roles and missions. For without it we become an isolated island incapable of fulfilling our world wide commitments and with little or no choice in courses of action to oppose the basic long term communist objective of world domination.

Q—The 30 June 1954 estimated active strength of USSR warships was 529, compared with 406 USN. What is the present comparison, broken down by battleships, cruisers, attack aircraft carriers, light aircraft carriers, destroyer types and submarine types?

A—A comparison is as follows: U.S.—Soviet, cruisers—20, 27; attack aircraft carriers—15, 0; support aircraft carriers—9, 0; destroyers—249, 175; submarines—110, 400; patrol vessels—84,300; mine warfare vessels—114, 500; auxiliary vessels—240, 250.

Q—Has the larger number of Soviet submarines caused the U.S. Navy to give greater attention to anti-submarine warfare measures?

A—Yes. Improvements in weapon systems and in design of ships, aircraft, and submarines to counter the growing Soviet submarine fleet are under active prosecution and may have already been realized.

Q—Have advances in this field been significant?

A—Yes. Detection ranges have been tripled. Range and destruction potential of anti-submarine weapons have been substantially increased.

Navy Counters Soviet Advances

Q—What other fields of research and development have been intensified as a result of the Soviet naval build-up?

A—It is not possible to point to a direct causal relationship between the size of the Soviet Navy and the direction of U.S. naval research and development. The purpose of the naval research programs is to provide the best possible weapons and equipment regardless of how many ships, aircraft, missiles and other items may be ordered. Naval research has emphasized all avenues leading to well-rounded naval striking power and defensive capabilities. No sudden shifts of emphasis are necessary to keep abreast of Soviet naval strength.

Increased technical knowledge during recent years and the development of new and extremely potent U.S. naval weapons have made obvious the need for counter-measures to possible similar Soviet advances. Therefore, much research and development emphasis has been placed on the following technical, weapons and warfare areas (this emphasis is part of the over-all effort to prepare the Navy for any probable type of conflict and was not generated solely by the growing strength in numbers of the Soviet Navy):

- Anti-submarine warfare — including such fields as mine countermeasures, harbor defense, underwater ordnance
- Electronics
- Acoustics
- Ship design and propulsion
- Guided missiles
- Weapons systems
- Logistics
- Tactics
- Seaward extension of continental defense

Q—What excessive demands have been placed upon the fleets as a result of the present requirement for maintaining combat units overseas?

A—The requirement to maintain the present level of combat units overseas has placed a heavy burden on the operating forces. In addition, we have been embarked upon a modernization program particularly for carriers and cruisers which has increased the difficulty of scheduling the rotation of ships in deployment. As a result, some individual fleet units have had heavy demands placed on them which have reduced the time allowed these units in home ports or for training in the vicinity of their home ports. The program has been further complicated by the necessity to accomplish a number of special tasks such as the Arctic DEW line construction and resupply operations, the Antarctic operations and the support of the International Geophysical Year, Naval Academy and Reserve Midshipman cruises and the support of periodic Atomic Energy Commission tests. The foregoing has resulted in a tempo of peacetime operations unequalled except in war.

Officers And Men Face Heavy Burden

Q—Have these commitments affected the deployment of Naval vessels, their maintenance, their crews?

A—The effects of these commitments on deployment of naval vessels have been discussed in the previous answer. The maintenance of naval ships under these circumstances is a pressing problem in view of the average age of Navy ships. It is felt that our ships are being maintained in a satisfactory material condition by the judicious use of shore based and afloat overhaul and repair facilities for this purpose. The effect of extended operations on personnel has been to place a heavy responsibility on the shoulders of officers, petty officers and enlisted men for proper operation and maintenance of Navy ships on distant duty. It is clear that these personnel have accomplished this task in an outstanding manner.

Q—Is the Navy still operating its ships at a reduced manning level?

A—Yes. In peacetime the Navy always operates its ships with less personnel than during wartime.

Q—How much lower are they than wartime levels?

A—This information is classified.

Q—How does this affect the efficiency of the fleet?

A—We are capable of fulfilling our current missions with our ships manned at current levels.

Q—Is the Navy meeting its requirements for highly skilled technicians?

A—The Navy is experiencing some difficulty in meeting its requirements for highly skilled technicians. It is expected that the Navy will be somewhat below requirements at the end of the current fiscal year in about 12 ratings requiring highly skilled technicians.

Need More Technicians

Q—Will the anticipated expansion of the atomic-powered vessels and guided missile ships call for more technicians?

A—Yes, the revolutionary advances in the fields of nuclear propulsion and guided missiles require large numbers of highly skilled technicians. Design features in new programs such as these are necessarily complicated. It is anticipated that after service use of many of these units, the complexity of the equipment will be reduced with an attendant reduction in the requirements per unit for skilled technicians.

Q—What new schools or training facilities are contemplated to prepare officers and men for the operations of these vessels?

A—Insofar as nuclear power is concerned, present facilities at Idaho Falls and at the Submarine School, New London, are being expanded in a limited degree to provide for the required increase in personnel trained in nuclear power. Studies are being made concerning the location and increase of facilities that will be required for the large number of personnel eventually required to man nuclear-powered surface ships. Insofar as guided missiles are concerned, work should commence this spring on a new guided missile school building at Dam Neck for training personnel in all phases of guided missile maintenance and control.

Q—Is the current enrollment at Navy officer candidate schools satisfactory?

A—The current enrollment at the Officer Candidate School, Newport, and at the Aviation Officer Candidate School, Pensacola, is considered satisfactory.

Boost OCS Quotas

What plans, if any, does the Navy have to increase or decrease its OCS quotas?

A—The Navy plans to increase OCS quotas in fiscal year 1957 in order to meet an increase in the planned 1957 officer replacement requirements over the current year. During 1956 required output from OCS Newport is approximately 2600. The 1957 officer requirements to be obtained from OCS will increase appreciably to between 4,000 and 5,000.

Q—Is the Navy meeting planned quotas for doctors, dentists, nurses and Naval Aviation Cadets? If not, what corrective steps are planned or are already being taken?

A—Although the Navy has met the need for physicians during fiscal year 1956 without reliance on Selective Service, preliminary estimates based on procurement experience and planned requirements for fiscal year 1957 point toward the possible necessity of resorting to Selective Service to obtain the required input of physicians for fiscal year 1957.

There is currently no problem concerning dentists and none is anticipated in the foreseeable future.

The Navy is experiencing difficulty in meeting the planned quotas for nurses. As a result of the indicated deficiency in the number of nurses, a joint Bureau of Naval Personnel-Bureau of Medicine and Surgery study of the problem and of appropriate remedial measures was conducted. In support of an accelerated procurement program, publicity oriented toward the Nurse Corps has been increased, physical standards for nurses have been relaxed, additional nurses have been assigned to nurse procurement duties, and Naval Officer Procurement activities have been devoting greater emphasis and effort to nurse procurement.

Some difficulty is being experienced in meeting planned quotas for Naval Aviation Cadets. Both the Recruiting Service and the NavCad procurement activities have lately increased their effort in order to meet the deficiency. In October 1954, the number of NavCad Recruiting Officers was increased and the procedure was initiated whereby selected NavCads return to their home towns on completion of flight training for the purpose of participating in local NavCad recruiting drives. Additional NavCad Recruiting Officers have been stationed at air stations near training centers for the purpose of obtaining qualified recruits for NavCad training.

Q—Are there any other categories of officers in which the Navy is experiencing shortages? Or enlisted categories?

A—In regard to officers, the Navy presently is experiencing shortages in Line aviation and in the Nurse Corps. In regard to enlisted personnel, as was indicated by reply to an earlier question, the Navy is experiencing certain relative shortages in the highly skilled technician category. It is estimated that the Navy will have some 10 per cent less than its petty officer requirement in this category by the end of this fiscal year.

Q—What is the present annual output of new pilots? Is this to be increased or decreased under fiscal '57 manpower plans?

A—In Fiscal Year 1956 the standard student output from flight training will total 2900 USN and USMC pilots. The input of students in Fiscal year 1956 will be sufficient to produce an ultimate output of 3200 Navy and Marine pilots. It is tentatively planned that this rate of input will continue in Fiscal year 1957.

Q—Does the Navy plan any further cutbacks in the number of Reserve officers on active duty? If not, will the number of active duty Reservists be increased?

A—The Navy does not have plans for release of Reserve officers on active duty based on a priority of retention list. The normal number of releases incident to normal administrative procedures, such as twice failing of selection, over-age in grade, etc., will take place; however, the number of Reserve officers on active duty will remain substantially the same.

Interview Sec'y Thomas From preceding page—

A further slight reduction in reserve strength may come about as Reserve officers transfer to the Regular Navy through the Augmentation Program.

May Use 6-Mo. Trainees

Q—Does the Navy plan to make use of the six-month trainee program provided in the Reserve Forces Act?

A—The Navy is presently studying means and methods for possible utilization of this program.

Q—What is the present Navy reenlistment rate for men completing their first enlistment? For all others? Has the rate increased since passage of the new reenlistment bonus law? To what extent?

A—During the six-month period from July to December 1955, the first term reenlistment rate has been averaging about 11 per cent. The career (i.e., those completing second or subsequent enlistments) reenlistment rate has been averaging about 92 per cent during this period. Prior to the passage of the new reenlistment bonus law in July 1954, the reenlistment rates were declining rapidly. Between January and June 1954 the first-term reenlistment rate declined from 11 per cent to 6 per cent and the career rate declined from 80 per cent to 40 per cent. Following passage of the new bonus law and the Career Incentive Act the reenlistment rates commenced the upward trend to the present day averages. Of course, there have been many factors affecting the course of reenlistment rates, however, enactment of the bonus law and the Career Incentive Act came at a time when the reenlistment rates were at a dangerously low level and can, therefore, be cited as major action that changed the trend.

Q—What difficulties does the Navy face in formulating its FY 1957 promotion plans? Will any of these problems require new legislation? Will such legislation be introduced during the next session of Congress?

A—It is not contemplated that the Navy will encounter any difficulties in the formulation of its promotion plans for fiscal 1957 which will require new legislation.

Q—Of the legislation now under consideration by the Congress, which personnel measures are of the greatest interest to the Navy?

A—Of the personnel legislation pending in the Second Session of the 84th Congress, it is considered that the items of greatest interest to the Navy are those concerned with medical care of service personnel and their dependents, survivor benefits, substandard housing, and career incentives for doctors and dentists.

Q—If priorities were assigned to major bills now pending in the Congress, how would the Navy rate the following measures: Survivor Benefits—H.R. 7089; Academy Credit—H.R. 2213; Medical Care—H.R. 9429; Readjustment Pay—H.R. 9952; Rent Reductions for Inadequate Housing—H.R. 5731; Top-Rank Retirement—H.R. 8904?

A—It is not possible to rate these measures in order of importance since there is no common basis of comparison. While all are considered important as career incentives probably the two most important measures listed are the Medical Care and the Survivor Benefits bills since they affect the largest numbers of personnel.

Full Text of Gen. Pate's Letter to SecNav on the "Tragedy of Ribbon Creek"

Following is the text of a communication, dated 30 April, sent from General Randolph McC. Pate, USMC, Marine Corps Commandant, to Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas via RAdm. Ira H. Nunn, USN, Judge Advocate General of the Navy.

Subj: Record of Proceedings of a court of inquiry convened at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C. by order of the Commanding General dated 9 April 1956:

1. Readdressed and forwarded.
2. This case is an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death by drowning of six Marines at the Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C. on the night of 8 April 1956.
3. The apparent cause of these deaths was the act of an assistant drill instructor who led his recruit platoon into a tidal stream as an incident of a night march ordered by him on his own initiative for presumed disciplinary reasons. The convening authority has approved a recommendation of the court of inquiry for the trial by general court-martial of the acting drill instructor, Staff Sergeant McKeon, and I agree that this is necessary. Accordingly, the charges are forwarded for action by the Secretary of the Navy.
4. However, I do not agree with the action of the court in confining its finding of fact and opinions to the relatively narrow issue of the degree of culpability attributable to Sergeant McKeon. The court was not so confined by its appointing order. It is obvious that the court was not confined by a paucity of evidence or information. While the court with the evidence and information available might well have broadened its findings, it is apparent that the necessary action can be taken upon the basis of the whole record. The course of action which I must take is clear.
5. The case of Sergeant McKeon is a matter for disposition in accordance with the Uniform Code of Military Justice, but there are other matters which must be considered. The Marine Corps system of recruit training has been drawn into question. In a very real sense the Marine Corps is on trial for the tragedy of Ribbon Creek just as surely as is Sergeant McKeon. I will not blind myself to this fact, nor will I seek to disown the responsibility which is mine as Commandant of the Marine Corps.
6. The Marine Corps has operated a recruit depot at Parris Island, South Carolina, for nearly half a century. Where the other services have taken pride in their service academies, West Point and Annapolis, the Marine Corps has formed somewhat the same attachment for its celebrated recruit training depot, rightfully regarding it as a unique and outstanding institution. It has provided hard and grueling training but has nevertheless taken a strong hold on the rank and file of those who have known its rigorous environment. Men who were destined to become cabinet officers, senators, congressmen, college professors, generals, admirals, and other outstanding personages are numbered among the legion of young men who have passed through it. Few of its graduates have ever condemned it.
7. Recruit training consists in preparing and conditioning mentally, physically, and emotionally a group of young and naturally well-disposed youths to meet the experience of violence and bloodshed which is war. It would be a poor rationalization to profess any other objective.
8. For the individual there is nothing logical in war, there is no reward for him save the satisfaction of fulfilling his duty to the nation, tempered by the bleak prospect of dismemberment or death. Men who face the ordeal of battle without flinching do so because of some loyalty, some abstract sense of dedication to cause or purpose, some natural or instilled pride in resolute behavior sufficient to override every natural instinct for survival.

9. The deliberate inculcation of this spirit has always been the supreme object of our recruit training. Parris Island over the years and through the wars has put forth a remarkable breed of hard, well-trained and fiercely loyal young men admirably trained to serve the nation's purpose of winning the wars in which it engages. These men form an elite group which is the envy of every general staff in the world. On the battlefield they have never given their nation a moment's cause for doubt or shame. They have done everything their country has ever asked them to do and usually much more.

10. These men are products of a system which also produced the tragedy of Ribbon Creek. This system is characterized by its exclusive employment of senior noncommissioned officers entrusted with the duty of teaching men to be Marines. They are selected with the greatest care using the best means available to discover such men. In a Corps which has been unique in regarding the noncommissioned officer as the backbone of its recruit training structure, an assignment as drill instructor carries with it the highest stamp of approval.

11. The only reward for such an assignment lies in pride of selection and sense of accomplishment. This duty is not shunned but is not sought after. It means a lonely, withdrawn existence of constant surveillance, long hours of drill and instruction and the intense concentration on the attainment of a detailed perfection. The work is physically exhausting and it must be continued week after week, platoon after platoon. I know of no harder life anywhere in the armed forces nor do I know of any finer or more dedicated group of men than the square-shouldered drill sergeants who perform this arduous task.

12. Since World War II some practices have crept into the handling of recruits which are not only unnecessary but do not comport with the dignity of the individual or his self-respect. Such practices were extremely rare in the past. While they are still relatively rare, I attribute their increasing appearance in recent years to the lack of mature judgment on the part of a certain few drill instructors. This has led occasionally to senseless acts in the nature of hazing and having no place in an ordered and responsible military institution. Hazing, indignities in any form, mass punishment or disciplinary marches to the point of exhaustion form no proper part of our recruit training system. The system has continued to engender loyalty and love of country and to produce hard-fighting Marines in spite of any such abuses—certainly not because of them.

13. Logically, however, the question should be asked, "Why hasn't the Marine Corps taken action prior to this time to correct any such shortcomings in its training program?" The answer is that steps were taken, but they were not fully effective. Despite the stern disciplinary action which was taken whenever these abuses were discovered they were apparently never entirely eradicated. Finally there has been a reluctance to alter radically a system which has been so successful in teaching Marines how to fight and win.

14. It was against this background that Sergeant McKeon, an experienced Marine, but an inexperienced assistant drill instructor, committed his egregious lapse. The court of inquiry found that he violated the code of the noncommissioned officer by drinking in the barracks, by drinking while on duty, and by drinking in the presence of a recruit. The record of the court also indicated that while under the influence of alcohol to an undetermined degree he unfortunately chose to order

COMMANDANT SPEAKS

In a very real sense the Marine Corps is on trial for the Tragedy of Ribbon Creek just as surely as is Sergeant McKeon. . . .

Parris Island over the years and through the wars has put forth a remarkable breed of hard, well-trained and fiercely loyal young men admirably trained to serve the nation's purpose of winning the wars in which it engages. . . .

I know of no harder life anywhere in the armed forces nor do I know of any finer or more dedicated group of men than the square-shouldered drill sergeants who perform this arduous task (that of drill instructor). . . .

Hazing, indignities in any form, mass punishment or disciplinary marches to the point of exhaustion form no proper part of our recruit training system. . . .

While we have recognized the need for closer supervision, we are convinced that the actual training of recruits must be conducted by the same men who give them orders in battle—the men who are the backbone of our Corps—the noncommissioned officers.

his platoon out on a night march because of a minor deviation from the very strict standard of conduct to which recruits must adhere.

15. I reiterate, that for the deaths of the six young Marines which resulted from this march, the Marine Corps is on trial in a moral sense just as is Sergeant McKeon. The supervision of our system of recruit training must therefore be reorganized. It is apparent to me that the failure stems essentially from the fact that we have continued to place in the hands of the drill instructors a degree of authority which does not take into account that, due to unavailability, some of today's drill instructors do not possess the service experience or maturity of those of former years who needed little supervision from their commissioned officers. We have been slow to admit this fact and to accept its implications. We are going to face them now. Consequently, I have taken the following action:

a. I have directed a reorganization of the training at Parris Island insofar as the supervision thereof is concerned. This will involve the transfer and reassignment of the Commanding General and certain other officers.

b. I have established at Parris Island and also at San Diego separate Recruit Training Commands. Each will be commanded by a brigadier general especially selected by me and who will report to me directly in order that I may personally control and monitor the steps which must be taken to insure more effective supervision of our recruit training system.

c. I have appointed at my Headquarters an Inspector General of Recruit Training to assist me in the close supervision of the system. I will continue this extraordinary organization under my direct and personal control until I am convinced that there can be no cause for any American to offer reasonable objection to the Marine Corps recruit training program.

d. I have issued instructions to these newly-formed recruit training commands that all desirable training features be retained, that present standards of discipline and physical conditioning be maintained and that all measures seeking to indoctrinate recruits in love of country and Corps be continued but that any and every practice which may have arisen at Parris Island or San Diego which involves or suggests hazing, punishment or any other form of treatment incompatible with accepted American standards of human dignity be absolutely eliminated.

e. I am staffing each Recruit Training Command with a full complement of specially selected officers to supervise and monitor but not to supplant the drill instructors in the conduct of recruit training.

16. By these measures we shall preserve the best features of the present system, eradicate any existing deficiencies and prevent others from occurring in the future.

17. While we have recognized the need for closer supervision, we are convinced that the actual training of recruits must be conducted by the same men who give them orders in battle—the men who are the backbone of our Corps, the noncommissioned officers. We must always bear in mind that the objective of the system is to produce a well-trained Marine, faithful to his Corps, devoted to his nation, and equipped with all the essential knowledge we can give him to assure success in battle.

18. The Marine Corps is the first to recognize the full meaning of this tragedy. It has saddened Marines at every post and station of the Corps—on every ship of the Navy where we serve afloat. The action I am taking will do everything that I know to prevent a recurrence of such a situation, but at the same time maintain the high standards of the Marine Corps.

19. Subject to the foregoing remarks, I concur in the findings, opinions, and recommendations of the court and the action of the convening authority thereon.

R. MCC. PATE

MEDAL OF HONOR WINNER IS INSPECTOR

Maj. Gen. David M. Shoup, USMC, a WWII Medal of Honor winner and Marine Corps Fiscal Director, has been tapped by General Pate to fill the newly created post of Inspector General for Training. His appointment was announced on 2 May; the day before the Marines had said that Maj. Gen. Edward S. Snedeker, USMC, Assistant CofS, G-3, would fill the post.

Instead, General Snedeker will remain on duty at the Pentagon.

General Shoup will be succeeded by Col. Frederick L. Wiesman, USMC, who has been selected for brigadier general.

General Pate told the House Armed Services Committee that Maj. Gen. Joseph C. Burger, USMC, was being shifted from command of Parris Island, S. C., to Camp Lejeune, N. C., because of a desire to have a "clean slate" at Parris Island.

The Commandant stressed that he holds General Burger "in high regard," and pointed out that the latter had been at Parris Island less than three months when the training tragedy occurred.

Maj. Gen. Homer L. Litzenberg, USMC, goes from Lejeune to Parris Island in a switch of jobs.

However, at Parris Island, recruit training will be placed under Brig. Gen. Wallace M. Greene, Jr., USMC, 2d Marine Division ADC at Lejeune, who will report directly to the Commandant. Similarly, Brig. Gen. Alan Shapley, USMC, 1st Marine Division ADC at Camp Pendleton, Calif., will head recruit training at the San Diego Marine Corps Recruit Depot.

People of Service Around the World

Our People of Service. Last week's issue of THE JOURNAL contained an editorial pointing to the good works being done by thousands of Service wives throughout the world. Just arrived is a report we want to pass on to our readers. The Tobyhanna Signal Depot Officers' Wives' Club in Pennsylvania, we learn, already has started work on Christmas projects. It's a small club and they want to get as much done as possible. So the wives are dressing dolls, making stuffed animals, filling scrap books and knitting caps and mittens for a nearby orphanage. With many of the Wives Clubs preparing to close formal activities for the season, we thought that telling the Tobyhanna Christmas Story would be a fitting salute for all our People of Service.

■ MOUNT POCONO, PA.—The Christmas project for 1956 of the Tobyhanna Signal Depot Officers' Wives' Club is well underway. Due to the small number of military wives at Tobyhanna, an early start on the project was deemed advisable in order to complete a large number of items to send to a local orphanage by Christmas time. The members are dressing dolls, making stuffed animals, scrap books, and also knitting caps and mittens.

■ FT. BENNING, GA.—Seven Infantry Center soldiers were rushed by helicopter and car last week to St. Francis Hospital in nearby Columbus, Ga., to donate a rare type of blood.

Hospital officials called Col. Gilmon A. Huff, commander of Lawson Army Air Field, to request aid in locating type "A," Rh negative blood.

Lawson Field, Combat Training Command and 151st Engineer Group officers screened nearly 6,000 personnel records of their units to locate the seven donors. Of the seven, blood from only two was needed. They were SP2 Lawrence Hassell, Headquarters and Service Company, 577th Engineer Battalion, and SFC William B. Echerd, Jr., 78th Engineer Battalion.

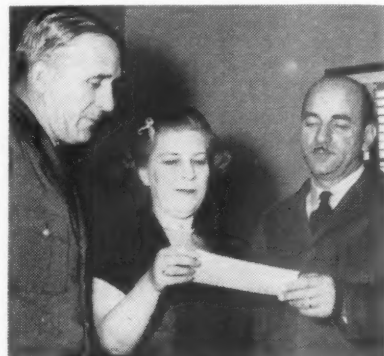

■ ROBINS AFB, GA.—A nine-year-old Chinese orphan girl, Tsang Oi Yan, has been adopted by civilian employees of the Central Cost Accounting Branch.

The child now lives in the Fanling Babies Home in Hong Kong.

■ HOLLOMAN AIR DEVELOPMENT CENTER, N. M.—Seventeen Gray Ladies received service bars or chevrons recently. Four-year service chevrons went to Mesdames Loraine Curry, Ellen Foley, Geneve Johnson and Eleanor Steele. Three-year service bars were awarded to Mesdames Phillis Chappell, Mrs. Bonnie Gillis and Mrs. Alena Joy. Getting two-year service awards were Mesdames Jean Livingston, Mary McClintock, Allene Strohn and Margaret Untz. Those receiving one-year awards included Mesdames Ruby Clutter, Elizabeth Clutter, Elizabeth Hazlip, Dora Hoffman, Beverly Simpson and Grace Willis.

■ ASCHAFFENBERG, GERMANY—The American community here will form a community chest type organization to sponsor worthy civic projects.

In a recent organizational meeting, representatives from the city's clubs and organizations met and agreed on a Community Welfare Council, which will consist of two representatives each from the 87th Inf. and the 40th FA Bn. and one each from each other military unit and civic organization in Aschaffenberg.

COL. VERNON S. SMITH, JR., USAF, left, deputy commander, Air Reserve Records Center, and Col. Morris Bush, USAF, right, Vice Commander, Air Force Finance Center, present a check for $1,000 to Mrs. Chester W. Rose, Chairman of the Colorado Chapter, National Multiple Sclerosis Society. The check, the largest single contribution received by the Colorado Chapter, represents contributions from employees of the two centers and the General Accounting Office there.

■ FT. BRAGG, N. C.—Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur H. Marsh, USA, 82d Airborne Division Chaplain, has presented a check for $156.35 to the Fayetteville Center for Handicapped Children to help finance a new school building for handicapped children. The money was collected at Division Easter Sunrise Services and morning worship services.

■ WIESBADEN, GERMANY. The Wiesbaden German-American Women's Club participated in German-American Friendship Week 29 April to 5 May. A giant Carnival was planned for 4 May at the Hoyt S. Vandenberg Elementary School Auditorium at Hainerberg. Proceeds will go to provide summer vacations for West German children.

Pentagon Plans Retired Pay For 200,000 Next Year; Cost Goes Over Half Billion

The Defense Department estimates that 201,819 military personnel will be on the retired lists at the end of about 12 months, compared with about 190,000 at present.

For the fiscal year starting 1 July, the Pentagon says that $525 million will be necessary to cover retirement costs—an increase of $30 million from this year's total.

At the beginning of 1956, the Services had 185,701 on the retired rolls, of whom 83,451 were retired upon completion of required service, statutory age or forced retirement for age and service.

There were 15,214 or 8 per cent in the temporary disability category and 66,841—36 per cent—on the permanent disability rolls.

Another 19,538, or about 11 per cent, were in the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Marine Corps.

The Defense Department also has reported to Congress that payments were being made to survivors of about 657 retired personnel under provisions of the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act. This legislation permits a retired person to accept reduced pay in order to provide an annuity for his survivors.

It is estimated that about $145 million will be necessary to cover USCOA payments in fiscal '57, compared with $965 thousand this year. The increase will provide benefits for survivors of an estimated 365 military retired military personnel.

Deductions from pay of retired persons for USCOA will total about $5 million.

Obituaries

Maj. Gen. Walter L. Reed, USA-Ret.

Funeral services were held in the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, Washington, D. C., on 3 May, for Maj. Gen. Walter L. Reed, USA-Ret, who died on 1 May, after an extended illness at Walter Reed Army Hospital, which was named for his illustrious father, Maj. Walter Reed. Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery. He was 78 years old.

Born at Ft. Apache, Ariz., General Reed enlisted in the Army as a private in 1896, and worked his way up through the enlisted ranks, until he was promoted to a 1st lieutenant in 1904. His first overseas tour was in Cuba in 1901, where his father had conducted his renowned work against yellow fever. General Reed served also in the Philippines and in Panama. In 1918, he was with the 7th Division in France, becoming Camp Inspector at Brest in 1919, and in 1920, he was named Inspector General of the American Expeditionary Forces. Retired from active duty in 1940, General Reed was recalled to active service in April 1942, when he was assigned to the Army Group in Washington. Before his final retirement in 1945, he served in the Office of the Secretary of War. Since then, he had made his home in Washington.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Landon C. Reed of 2810 36th Pl., N.W., Washington; two daughters, Mrs. Charles H. Royce of 4660 Reservoir Rd., N.W., Washington, and Mrs. John K. Monro of Marlborough, Wilshire, England; one sister, Mrs. Blossom Reed of Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.; and three grandchildren.

Mrs. Laura Pittard Edwards

Burial services were held at Arlington National Cemetery on 1 May, for Mrs. Laura Pittard Edwards, wife of Capt. David S. Edwards, USN, who died on 26 April, at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md.

Born at Winterville, Ga., and an alumna of the Georgia State College, Mrs. Edwards, known to her friends as "Lolly," was first married to the late Cdr. Walker Ethridge, USN, who was killed in combat in the Western Pacific in March 1945. She was married to Captain Edwards in Pensacola, Fla., in July 1946.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Harrison F. Pittard of Atlanta, Ga.; and one brother, Capt. George F. Pittard, USN.

Col. William R. Taube, USAF

Funeral services for Col. William R. Taube, USAF, who died at his home at Midwest City, Okla., on 25 April, were held at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D. C., on 30 April.

A graduate of the School of Business of Harvard University, Colonel Taube was a veteran of 20 years' service. During WWII, he served as President of the Air Service Board, and later was in charge of logistics missions to the Pacific theater for the Air Force. Colonel Taube had been stationed at Tinker AFB, Okla., for the past three years, where he was Assistant for Programming of the Oklahoma City Air Materiel Area.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Taube; one son, William Taube; and three daughters, Mary, Nancy and Kathryn Taube.

M/Sp. Anthony Cortizas

M/Sp. Anthony Cortizas, 51, died at Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D. C., on 26 April, following a long illness.

A native of Cuba, Specialist Cortizas attended the New Jersey School of Industrial Art and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, prior to entering the Army in 1942. As the only Medical sculptor in military service, "Tony," as he was familiarly known, had worked for the past nine years at the Medical Museum of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, designing plastic models of internal organs and glands for use in the Armed Forces' training program. Specialist Cortizas will be long remembered by more than 500 wounded soldiers, whose facial scars were minimized by "Tony's" tattooing technique. Using a skin-toned pigmented material, Specialist Cortizas blended vivid scar tissue with his patients' normal skin shades.

In off-duty hours, Specialist Cortizas set up an Arts and Science Club for the boys and girls of the southwest Washington area.

A bachelor, Specialist Cortizas is survived by his sister, Mrs. Maria DeBelaz of Nubitas, Cuba.

Lt. Col. Oscar Kain, USA-Ret.

Burial services were held at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D. C., on 26 April, for Lt. Col. Oscar Kain, USA-Ret., who died, following a long illness, at Bay Pines Veterans Hospital at St. Petersburg, Fla., on 22 April.

Colonel Kain enlisted in the Army in 1905. His service included such assignments as Columbus Barracks, Ohio, the Philippine Islands, Samoa, Vancouver Barracks, Wash., Hawaii, Ft. Lewis, Wash., and Camp Travis, Tex. A large part of his early service was spent in the old 1st Infantry. Colonel Kain was graduated from the Company Officers Course at Ft. Benning, Ga., in 1924, prior to joining the 10th Infantry, then stationed at Ft. Thomas, Ky. He later became an instructor with the 138th Infantry of the Missouri National Guard. While serving with the 11th Infantry at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., Colonel Kain was transferred to the Quartermaster Corps. His last assignment, before being retired from active duty in 1943, was at Ft. Barancas, Fla.

He is survived by his widow, who resides at 510 33d St., Bradenton, Fla.; and one daughter, Miss Lallie M. Kain of the same address.

Skyray Joins Fleet; Voodoo Order Told; Jet Starter Contract Let; Missile Advisors

The Navy's new high altitude interceptor, the supersonic Douglas F4D Skyray, has gone into service with the Fleet. Six of the bat-winged jets, designed and produced at El Segundo Division of Douglas, have been delivered to the Pacific and Atlantic fleets after completion of the fleet indoctrination program at Patuxent River Naval Test Center, Md.

More than 600 flight hours were logged on the F4D during an intensive period of familiarization flights by 10 Navy and two Marine pilots. One hundred enlisted men also participated in the Skyray training.

One of the fastest carrier-based aircraft ever built, the Skyray is designed for all-weather operations. Its light weight and extremely high rate of climb makes it a potent interceptor weapon.

Although basically designed for interception missions with guns and rockets, the F4D can be used effectively as a general purpose fighter. It also is capable of performing ground support missions using bombs and missiles.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

IMMEDIATE promotions to permanent rank are in store for about 250 Regular Coast Guard officers in ranks from lieutenant (jg) through captain.

They will be advanced from the list of Presidential nominations which was confirmed by the Senate on 26 April.

In all, President Eisenhower named 750 Regular officers for permanent commissions. Of this number, 40 are captains, 165 commanders, 144 lieutenant commanders, 225 lieutenants, and 89 lieutenants (jg).

Coast Guard eligibility lists show that there are vacancies for 25 of the 40 captains, 33 of the 165 commanders, 79 of the 144 lieutenant commanders, 100 of the 225 lieutenants, and all lieutenants (jg) who have three years of active duty.

In addition, the President named 89 ensigns.

Taking signal numbers from the 1955 official Register, the signal number of the junior officer in each grade on the eligibility lists is:

FOR PROMOTION TO	SIGNAL NUMBER
Captain	134
Commander	401
Lieutenant Commander ..	742
Lieutenant	1256
Lieutenant (jg)	1741

These lists do not include the following categories of officers: those whose permanent grade is warrant or enlisted; those who are out of line for promotion; and those SDO's who are temporary commanders not within the allowed number of permanent SDO commanders.

Headquarters advises all officers on the lists for permanent advancement to insure that they are up to date on promotion examinations so that no delay in effecting promotions will be necessary.

The remaining officers will be advanced on a month-to-month basis as vacancies occur on the eligibility lists.

Missile Age Brings Major Realignment In Army Artillery Program and Training

A full-scale shakeup of the Army's artillery training program will be put into effect in the new fiscal year beginning on 1 July.

The future school training of all artillery officers will be in either surface-to-surface artillery or surface-to-air artillery, but not both, below the advanced course level.

Ten school courses or portions of course on surface-to-surface subjects will be transferred from Fort Bliss, Tex., to Fort Sill, Okla.

Here is a complete picture of the new artillery training program as visualized by the Army. Prepared by the Army's top command, it gives a brief history of artillery training, shows the changes which have been and are being made in this field, and outlines the Army's plans for the future:

"Prior to and during World War II Artillery officers were school trained in either field artillery or antiaircraft artillery but not in both. Following that war, and faced with a rapidly diminishing troop basis, the Army determined that maximum utilization and flexibility in assignment of Artillery officers could best be achieved by training them in all weapons of both artilleries. Accordingly, the two branches were merged into a single Artillery branch and provisions were made for cross training in the two categories of weapons. Fort Sill, however, remained primarily responsible for the development and teaching of field artillery doctrine while Fort Bliss remained primarily responsible for the same activities as pertain to antiaircraft artillery. The cross training was achieved by controlling the input of students and their initial and subsequent assignment to units, by transition courses, and by movement of students between the two schools in the case of the advanced course.

"The Army had meanwhile undertaken a research and development program in rockets and, eventually guided missiles. This activity was centered in the El Paso area because of the facilities at White Sands Proving Ground. This program progressed during the intervening years to the point where the Army had available for its use two categories of these missiles: Those designed for use against airborne targets (surface-to-air missiles) and those designed for use against ground targets (surface-to-surface missiles).

"As production permitted, units were activated, organized and trained with these weapons. As the number of active units increased it became increasingly clear that we could no longer continue to train all Artillery officers under the jack-of-all-trades concept. The complexity of equipment related to these new weapons, the differing techniques required, and the economic limitations placed upon the length of time an officer could be retained in student status dictated a change in methods.

THUS, IN MAY OF 1955, upon the recommendation of the commanding general, continental Army command, and the commandants of both artillery schools, the Department of the Army approved a change in training methods. This change, partially implemented in fiscal year 1956 and to be implemented as fully as practicable in fiscal year 1957, provides that as a general policy the school training of artillery officers will be in either surface-to-surface artillery or surface-to-air artillery, but not both, below the advanced course level. These designations include all weapons, whether rocket, missile, or conventional gun, designed to fire on either a surface or an air target. It must be understood that as long as our present overseas commitments continue, full implementation of this plan cannot be realized.

"Initially, because of the proximity of adequate ranges and test facilities it was logical that the Army's missile activities should be centered around Fort Bliss, regardless of the particular categories of the missiles. As the missiles progressed technically and the need for the development of tactical and organizational doctrine became pressing, it was clear that the school having primary tactical interest in the weapon should be responsible for this aspect. This was evidenced by the necessity for integrating the particular weapons into the framework of conventional weapons in either field.

"Thus, the commandant at Fort Sill was given the responsibility for developing tactical and organizational doctrine for surface-to-surface artillery (currently Honest John, Corporal and conventional field artillery), while the commandant at Fort Bliss retained that responsibility for surface-to-air artillery (currently Nike and conventional antiaircraft artillery).

"Based upon the foregoing arrangements and after a detailed study, the Department of the Army considered it both feasible and desirable to transfer from Fort Bliss to Fort Sill 10 school courses or portions of courses on surface-to-surface subjects (Corporal) and 2 Corporal battalions.

"These courses deal with maintenance, organization, tactics and techniques, and with the functions of officers assigned to Corporal units. Concurrently, with the transfer of courses, an appropriate number of staff and faculty members will be transferred, together with the training aids and classroom equipment related to the courses. Certain basic electronics equipment will not be transferred inasmuch as basic electricity is a requirement for all guided-missile students and electronics are common to all guided missiles regardless of category. In substance, the personnel to be transferred are approximately as follows: Staff and faculty—33 officers, 16 warrant officers, 117 enlisted men, and 3 civilians; students—an intraining load of approximately 200. The overall intraining load at Fort Bliss is approximately 3,500. The total cost of the movement of the 10 courses is estimated to be $502,000.

"The reasons for effecting this transfer, which will be made in fiscal year 1957, are to place with the appropriate school commandant the instructional responsibility for his assigned field, to further the development of doctrine, and to allow greater emphasis to be placed on both surface-to-air and surface-to-surface artillery.

"The transfer of two Corporal battalions from Fort Bliss to Fort Sill will take place prior to the end of fiscal year 1956. This move is necessary in order to provide the commandant at Fort Sill with the personnel and equipment necessary to accomplish his mission in the organizational and doctrinal field. There are approximately 225 individuals in each of the 2 battalions. The cost of transferring the individuals and equipment of these 2 units is estimated to be $52,448 each.

"As previously stated, the total deficit in personnel at Fort Bliss as a result of the transfers of the 2 battalions is offset by the recent activation of a new artillery battalion, with an authorized strength of approximately 300, at Fort Bliss. Moreover, due to the increased training mission at Fort Bliss, the 168th Skyweeper Battalion which had been previously scheduled for movement from Fort Bliss is now to remain there. It is believed that expansions in the surface-to-air program, brought about by the introduction of new weapons in the immediate future, will more than offset the slight net strength reduction occasioned by transfers to Fort Sill.

"It is contemplated that all facilities at Fort Bliss which will be vacated as a result of the transfer of Corporal units and instruction to Fort Sill will be utilized in the surface-to-air program. For instance, Fort Bliss is short approximately 30 classrooms it needs to present its current surface-to-air instruction effectively. The movement to Fort Sill will assist in alleviating this shortage. In fact, to accommodate the constantly expanding surface-to-air training requirements, funds are being requested for fiscal year 1957 for new construction at Fort Bliss.

"It is contemplated that replacement training of new enlisted men in Corporal battalions will be continued at Fort Bliss where three Corporal battalions will be permanently stationed. These three battalions will be available to assist in the replacement training mission. The objective of this activity is to produce a soldier qualified to perform tasks not requiring the high degree of skill acquired in a school specialist course. It is desirable, although not essential, that whenever practicable these men participate in and observe actual firing of the weapon early in their training. This firing is available at Fort Bliss.

"Additionally, and because of the available ranges at Fort Bliss and White Sands, test activities for future missiles, both surface-to-air and surface-to-surface,

Lockheed A-Plane Plant Site Near Dawsonville

Facilities for research on nuclear-powered aircraft will be constructed near Dawsonville, Ga., by the Air Force and Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

The facilities will be owned by the Government and operated by Lockheed. Several hundred persons, mostly engineers and scientists, will be employed at the new laboratory.

Dan J. Houghton, vice president and general manager of the Georgia Division, recalled that: "Lockheed was one of the first airframe companies to contract directly with the Air Force for studies which could eventually lead to production of an atomic-powered airplane. As a company, we have for a long time been convinced that nuclear power for airplanes would be used. We have been doing design studies on such an airplane and naturally hope we will eventually see the winged star of Lockheed on a nuclear-powered plane... one that's built in Georgia."

Safety in all weather with TACAN

HOFFMAN makes the complete airborne portion of the TACAN system—another example of Hoffman integrated electronics at work

TACAN is the trustworthy electronic navigation system that unerringly guides pilots through fair and foul weather every second of the flight. Two compact dials on the instrument panel automatically show the pilot his exact distance and direction from a fixed ground station with an accuracy never before attained. Result: greater safety in any weather, any place.

Some of TACAN's advantages over other systems include: three times greater accuracy; handles more airplane traffic—allows planes to fly safely at closer intervals; permits starting landing approaches further out—minimizes "stack up" of planes waiting to land; meets military requirements for ruggedness, compactness and mobility.

The same teamwork, experience and facilities at Hoffman Laboratories that put TACAN into full scale production are available for you to use—whatever the size or complexity of your electronic needs. Why not discuss your specific systems engineering problem with a Hoffman Labs' representative soon?
